Anti-Prohibitionists In Congress Launch New Drive

REPEAL BILL INTRODUCED IN SENATE

Volstead Modification is Sponsored in House by Collier This Morning HEARING WEDNESDAY

Defeat of Repeal Resolution in House Tuesday Means An Extra Session

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Proposals for immediate change in the prohibition amendment and for modification of the Volstead act were thrust before the senate and house today as anti-prohibitionists determined to drive for early congressional action on repeal and beer.

The Democratic house leadership sponsored a Volstead modification measure introduced in the house by Chairman Collier of the ways and means committee, which will begin immediate consideration of the measure tomorrow.

The class recommitment prohibition amendment was referred to by the senate to the judiciary committee in a move of "moderate realists" for early senate action.

Speaker Garner sounded the second "wet" call to arms less than an hour after his unequalled repeal amendment had been beaten in the house by six votes.

The house ways and means committee believed friendly to Volstead modification, begins hearings on beer and light wine legislation tomorrow. Leaders expect to have the bill ready for house action within a week. Garner predicted passage before the Christmas recess.

Wet leaders, although bitterly disappointed by the repeal vote, pointed to their 272 to 144 majority as a certain indication that modification legislation is assured of at least house passage. The repeal resolution failed because it required a two-thirds vote. But beer needs only a bare majority.

Wet leaders also claim to be certain of the senate, but fear President Hoover would veto a

GOV. ROLPH CANCELS TRIP TO SALT LAKE

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Dec. 6.—(UP)—Cancelling his scheduled airplane trip to Salt Lake City early today, Gov. Rolph announced press of state business would not permit him to attend the conference of western governors.

The governor designated State Engineer Edward Hyatt and Major A. M. Barton, state reclamation engineer, to attend the meeting as his personal representatives.

Governor Rolph said he would fly to Los Angeles Wednesday, and attend the Fruit Growers and Farmers convention at Ventura Thursday.

WILL ROGERS SAYS:

BEVERLY HILLS, Dec. 6. (To the Editor of The Register:—) Europe turned out a movie called "Congress Dances," and it pleased everybody. Today our Congress met and pleased nobody.

In November the country went overwhelmingly wet. But a hundred Republicans and forty-four Democrats, mostly lame ducks, figured that the country didn't know what it wanted. So that means an extra session of Congress.

Regardless of what your opinion is on this subject, when you absolutely know that it will eventually pass, then to purposely hold it up and cost the government all this money, then you are a "lame duck," but not in the leg.

Yours, WILL.

CALIFORNIA TO ASK LOW FREIGHT RATES

FRESNO, Dec. 6.—(UP)—United for reduced freight rates on their products, California citrus, deciduous fruit and fresh vegetable growers will meet in San Francisco December 14 to formulate demands. It was planned today.

The three groups, according to an announcement made here by A. V. B. Klein, secretary-manager of the San Joaquin Grower-Shipper association, will present to the railroad demands for cuts in the present freight rates of $1.75 per 100 pounds on deciduous fruits and grapes, reductions in refrigeration charges, and deductions in rates on vegetables.

1000 CHINESE OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS HELD

Japanese Troops Clear All Western Manchuria of Rebel Chinese

MOSCOW, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Japanese troops have cleared western Manchuria of Chinese opposed to the Manchukuo regime and have driven Gen. Su Ping-Wen and his staff into Soviet territory, where they were interned, according to dispatches received here from Chita.

Su Ping-Wen, his staff, and 1000 officers and soldiers and civilian officials, were found aboard a Chinese eastern railway train that crossed the Siberian frontier and detained by soviet officials.

The Japanese thus completed the mission which began with an advance from Angang in sub-zero weather across the barren Manchurian plains toward Manchouli. Su Ping-Wen's headquarters. The troops were expected to reach Manchouli soon, completing occupation of the western branch of the Chinese Eastern railway from Tsitsihar to the Siberian frontier.

No mention was made of the fate of Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, officially listed as dead by the Japanese. He was reported to have thrown his army to Gen. Wen's support.

The Japanese advance carried them to the Heilung tunnel, the only practical means of passing the Khingan mountains. It was understood that the tunnel was taken with little opposition.

COMMISSIONER TO STAY IN SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—At least one Republican official expects to retain a $6500 government position against the March 4 onslaught of Democratic job hunters.

He is customs commissioner F. X. A. Eble. His present post, paying $10,000 a year, in the political category and he will have to relinquish it. But Eble has retained civil service ranking and plans to return to Berlin as chief customs agent, the position he left to come to Washington as commissioner.

Eble was appointed commissioner in 1929 on recommendation of Senator Smoot, Rep., Utah. In return he made a number of speeches in Smoot's unsuccessful reelection campaign.

STOWAWAYS ARE NOT PERMITTED TO LAND

CHERBOURG, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Marilyn Miller, actress, Don Alvarado, actor, and their party which sailed aboard the Bremen from New York without passports or tickets were not allowed to land here today and went on to Southampton.

Miss Miller was especially anxious to land and proceed to Paris, where her former husband, Jack Pickford, is ill.

Passengers insisted there had been no wedding aboard. Officers of the ship said the captain did not make a practice of marrying couples at sea, and had been rather busy anyhow with engine trouble which obliged the Bremen to halt for repairs the second day out of New York.

Marchers In Demands To Solons

Wrath of Vice-President Curtis Stirred Up in Presenting Papers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The "hunger marchers" laid their demands on the doorstep of congress today and incurred the wrath of Vice President Curtis.

Angry words were exchanged in the vice president's office after the marchers had moved on the capitol in a peaceful, two-mile parade.

Into the packed office of the vice president crowded a delegation of the marchers headed by William Reynolds, president of the unemployed council. Police stood guard around Curtis as Reynolds began:

"These demands represent 15,000,000 unemployed workers and their dependents. Likewise the farmers. We haven't much confidence that you . . ."

Curtis rose from his chair, his face flushed with anger. For one tense moment there was silence then Curtis said:

"Look here now, no reflections on me or I'll put you out of the door in a minute."

Reynolds paused a moment and then continued:

" . . . or this body you represent."

Given Petition

He then stopped forward and handed a petition to Curtis, demanding unemployment insurance and $50 direct relief for every jobless person.

Another delegation, headed by Herbert Benjamin and Ann Burlak, a blonde textile worker with a "torch singer" voice, called at the office of Speaker of the House Garner. He accepted a similar petition courteously.

The main body of the "hunger marchers," some 3000 strong, waited a block away from the capitol while the delegation was inside calling upon Curtis and Garner. The marchers sang and cheered. Their band kept up a constant blaring of the "International" martial music.

Peaceful Scene

The scene in Garner's office was peaceful although Benjamin tried to engage Garner in an argument. Garner quietly told him his time was limited and called attention to his record on unemployment relief. Then the speaker added:

"But while you control 3000 hunger marchers I can't even control 435 members of congress."

Carl Bradley of Baltimore, a Communist candidate for the senate in the November elections, was with Benjamin and Miss Burlak.

Eight negroes and two women were included in the delegation of 25 permitted to enter the capitol. They were closely guarded throughout their short stay.

The marchers left the capitol shortly after noon for the return to the New York avenue parade to go down Pennsylvania avenue in the direction of the White House and through the business district.

Government clerks on their noon lunch hour lined the curbs as the officers headed the marchers down the center of the street.

GOVERNMENT TO GRANT VISA TO EINSTEIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The American consulate in Berlin expected to grant a visa today to Professor Albert Einstein despite the protest of an American woman's organization that the famous German mathematician should be barred from this country as a "radical."

The consulate advised the state department it had questioned Einstein and found him admissible to the United States.

The department previously had informed the consulate of the protest filed here by the Woman Patriot Corporation. The complaint charged that Einstein was affiliated with more "dangerous organizations than Josef Stalin himself."

The message from Berlin did not say when Einstein planned to sail. The noted author of the theory of relativity visited the United States a year ago. He plans to lecture this winter at a new graduate school being established at Princeton university.

HOOVER WINS ONLY RIVERSIDE COUNTY

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6.—(UP)—With the exception of Riverside county, President-Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt carried every county in California, the official tabulation of the vote at the November election revealed today.

As tabulated and certified by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, the state vote was as follows:

Roosevelt 1,324,157; Hoover 847,902; Thomas 63,299; Upshaw 20,637; Harvey 9827; William J. Foster (write in) 1033; James Ford (write in) 994; scattering 127.

The 1928 vote for president was Hoover 1,162,323; Smith 614,365; and Thomas 29,556; Jordan reported.

THRILLING EPISODE AT SEA TAKES PLACE ABOARD HUGE FLOATING PALACE AT NIGHT

(Copyright, 1932, by United Press)

ABOARD CONTE DI SAVOIA, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The new S. S. Conte Di Savoia proceeded to New York at reduced speed today after members of her crew had inscribed an heroic episode in sea annals by swinging over the side on ropes and plugging a hole below the water line, while the ship hove to during the night in stormy weather.

The accident to the Savoia, on her maiden voyage to New York, occurred just as the passengers were preparing for a gala farewell dinner. Apparently a valve on the port generator had been sheared off. Water began pouring in the generator. The lights went out and passengers ran to the decks, some hastily donning life preservers.

The ship was hove to and immediate attempts at repairs were decided on. Several seamen volunteered to go overboard to plug the hole. Capt. Antonio Lena himself thought he ought to take the venture but the crew protested vigorously.

The honor went to Gennaro Amatrudo, 43, the father of four children in Amalfi, Italy.

He swung overboard in the darkness and rain at the end of a 70-foot rope, carrying a wooden line block to plug the hole.

He was buffeted by the strong sea and finally a mounting wave crushed him against the ship. In that moment, he swung the block, with a mat to stop the water, against the hole.

Above him, on rope ladders, helping to steady the line and giving directions, were Corrado Pinotti and four other men.

With the influx of water checked, the hole was welded and cemented, an unusual operation at sea. The ballast had been shifted and the ship listed heavily to starboard to raise the break above the water line and facilitate repairs. Nevertheless, one compartment had shipped several feet of water.

Calm was soon restored among passengers, who were much perturbed by the darkness and the list of the ship.

RECLAMATION DEFENDED AS NATION POLICY

National Association Organized at Meeting in Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The west and a generous slice of the south today stood as a formidable unit prepared to defend reclamation, as a national policy.

It is the old east-west fight. Thirteen states, including the 11 western states and Nebraska and Texas, organized the National Reclamation association yesterday. Its sole purpose is to launch a counter attack against asserted prejudicial attacks on reclamation emanating from the east.

Western reclamation leaders, 79 of them, and Dr. Elwood Mead, United States commissioner of reclamation, declared that the life of reclamation was at stake.

The conference created its permanent organization and elected Marshall N. Dana, Portland, Ore., president.

Other officers were: First vice president, Samuel Stephenson, Great Falls, Mont.; second vice president, W. R. Wallace, Salt Lake; A. E. Larsen, treasurer, Yakima, Wash.

The consulate advised the state department it had questioned Einstein and found him admissible to the United States.

BANDITS MAKE BIG HAUL FROM P. O. EMPLOYEES

Gunmen Escape With Registered Mail Valued at $25,000 to Million

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Five gunmen in an automobile waylaid two postoffice messengers today from the main postoffice in the loop, overpowered them and escaped with two pouches of registered mail, valued from $25,000 to $1,000,000.

The mail was addressed to the First National Bank and the First Union Trust company. Bank officers and postal clerks were checking on its value several hours after the robbery.

Edward Eagle Brown, vice president of the First National Bank, pointed out that no eastern mail, such as freight, have a high value, was included. He said:

"Of the 153 pieces of mail that were stolen, as many as 150 might have been addressed to our bank. The value is difficult to estimate. Previous Tuesday deliveries have aggregated $25,000 to $1,000,000. The covers, stocks, bonds and other securities."

ITALY PLANNING TO SEND DEBT MISSION

ROME, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Italy is preparing to send a mission to the United States to negotiate a new debt settlement, the United Press learned today.

The fascist grand council at a meeting that ended early today decided that Italy should pay her December 15 debt installment of $1,245,437 to Washington and then insist on a "clean slate" of reparations and war debts. The mission to negotiate a new debt agreement was not expected to go to Washington until President Roosevelt is inaugurated.

PLANE CRASHES IN SAN FRANCISCO FOG

OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 6.—(UP)—Encountering a heavy blanket of fog just as he prepared to land at Oakland airport early today, William T. Campbell, 33, of San Jose, crashed from an altitude of 25 feet and incurred minor cuts and bruises. Damage to the plane was nominal.

Campbell flies airmail between San Jose and Oakland for the United Airlines.

Net Income Of Railways Year's Best

Hoover's Message Received With Favor in Street; Stocks Advance

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Hoover's message to congress with favor today and stocks rose to 5 points in slightly increased turnover.

The list moved up after a firm opening. Weakness in a few special issues brought slight unsettlement in the early afternoon. But near the close the upturn was resumed, leading issues making new highs for the day.

Wheat regained part of a loss of more than a cent a bushel and closed down 3-4 to 7-8c. Corn lost 3-4c. Cotton held small gains. Bonds were mixed in a narrow range.

Aside from the president's message there was little market news. The aggregate October railroad net income made the best showing of the year. Failures in the business world increased moderately. Dow, Jones & Co., estimated steel production at 17 per cent against 16 last week.

The weak spots were sawmills, stores which touched 37 3-4 off 4 7-8 on dividend uncertainty and International Telephone off more than a point on difficulties with the Spanish government over its telephone subsidiary in Spain.

Ability of the list to rise in the face of the defeat yesterday of the repeal resolution brought in considerable short covering. The bears bought more heavily as the close neared and tickers were running almost all capacity.

Railroad shares were the leaders throughout the day. Their October showing was the main stimulant. In that month net operating income of all class one roads was down only 0.5 per cent.

Union Pacific jumped more than 5 points while gains of one to more than 3 points were made by New York Central, Atchafalpa, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, and Lehigh Valley.

American Telephone reached 107 1/2 in the day where it was up 4 1-2 points. Consolidated Gas was up more than 2 points and utilities generally were strong.

HERIOT NOT TO ASK VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(UP)—French Ambassador Paul Claudel was understood today to have informed the government that Washington would refuse postponement of the $200,000,000 war debts payment due Dec. 15.

Premier Edouard Herriot reportedly therefore decided not to ask a vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies during the debate on war debts, thus avoiding the overthrow of his government.

The majority opinion of the chamber definitely turned toward default today when Socialist leaders prepared a resolution suggesting further conversations with Washington and extension of the moratorium on debts and reparations. The chamber already has before it the motion of nationalist Deputy Louis Marin, calling practically for repudiation of the debt.

GOVERNORS PLAYED BY UTAH EXECUTIVE

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Governor George H. Dern of Utah today vigorously criticized governors of western states for their failure to attend the Western governors' conference which convened today.

His statement came as a complete surprise at the opening session. He spared no words in arraignment western executives for their failure to attend.

Only four governors were at the conference—Gov. C. Ben Ross of Idaho, Gov. Fred Balzar of Nevada, Gov. A. M. Clark of Wyoming and Governor Dern.

FAMOUS GLOBE TROTTER SLAIN ABOARD VESSEL

Capt. Walter Wanderwell is Shot in Back and Killed at Long Beach

LONG BEACH, Dec. 6.—(UP)—A background of war time espionage was developed by police today as they sought the mysterious slayer of Captain Walter Wanderwell, professional globe trotter.

Wanderwell was shot in the back as he moved over sea charts in the cabin of his schooner last night. He was about to embark on another of his cruises for landlubbers to remote places.

From secret service operatives police learned Wanderwell's real name was Valerian Johannes Geynsyd who was arrested as a German spy during the war and sent to the Atlanta penitentiary. He and his wife were arrested in 1925 and charged with illegally wearing army uniforms.

His two small children Valry Nell, 6, and Nila, 5, were asleep in the room when a man described as a "mysterious stranger" apparently entered the cabin and without word of warning fired a bullet into the victim's back. As mysteriously as he had entered, the stranger vanished, according to the story told by members of the captain's party who were on board.

The party was composed of Cuthbert Mills, chief engineer; Edmund Zernski, cameraman; Miss Marian Smith of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss Mary Parker of Boston. Wanderwell's secretary, who said they were in another cabin 10 feet away when the single shot was heard.

The "mysterious stranger" whom they described, was reported to have appeared in their cabin only a few moments before and inquired if Wanderwell was around. They directed him to the skipper's cabin and a few seconds later, they said, they heard a shot.

When they arrived at the master's quarters, they found him dying, slumped over a divan that was surrounded by charts and treasures of his many motor and yacht cruises. Members of the party insisted, according to police, that the killer could not have escaped to the deck between the time the shot was fired and their arrival at the death scene. An exhaustive search of the ship's hold, however, was fruitless.

The four and 12 other members of the party who arrived after police were held for questioning.

Wanderwell, who since the World war had rammed over the globe in interest of a plan to organize an international police corps, was killed almost instantly. The bullet entered the back, penetrated the heart and imbedded itself just under the flesh of the chest. The shot had been fired at close range, physically at the point of contact, physicians said.

The pistol was lying on the floor at his feet.

CITIZENS COMBINE TO PREVENT RIOTS

VACAVILLE, Calif., Dec. 6.—Fearing reprisals against citizens who yesterday removed six striking ranch hands from the Vacaville jail and daubed their heads in red paint after shaving off their hair, 200 armed citizens were held in readiness for further outbreaks here today.

The citizens were mustered into police duty late last night when authorities were advised that 100 armed communists were enroute from Sacramento to Vacaville. Sacramento authorities later advised that the plan was abandoned when only a few recruits volunteered for the march.

Vacaville resembled a military camp today as special deputies patrolled the streets and refused to permit loiterers to gather in groups.

REVISION OF BANK LAWS ALSO URGED

President Outlines Policy of Economy in Annual Message to Congress

OUTLOOK IS BRIGHTER

Statistics Indicating Progress Since July Are Cited; Asks Wage Cuts

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—President Hoover in his final annual message to the congress today demanded wholesale revision of the banking laws and "vigorous co-operation" with foreign nations as the basis for restoration of confidence and a return of economic stability.

Mr. Hoover recommended a broadened uniform general manufacturers' sale tax as a means of balancing the budget.

He urged additional salary cuts for government workers and promised a thorough reorganization of government departments.

The message was vigorous in tone and mildly encouraging in its outlook on the economic situation. Statistics indicating progress since July were cited.

The president touched on foreign war debts and let it be known he would have a subsequent communication covering this crisis in detail as soon as present negotiations are completed.

He outlined three "definite directions" for action to speed recovery. They are:

1.—Continuation of reduction of all government costs.

2.—Complete reorganization at once of the nation's banking system.

3.—Vigorous and whole-souled co-operation with other governments in the economic field.

Touching briefly on the budget for 1933-34, which he will outline in a message tomorrow, the president declared the budget "will show proposed reduction in appropriations below those enacted by the last session of the congress by over $250,000,000."

He made clear, however, that "these sums in reduction of appropriations will be partially offset by an increased debt service, etc.," making the estimated saving about $250,000,000, according to his figures.

Sales Tax Urged

The president said he would recommend an extension of the manufacturers' excise tax to cover practically all manufacturers at a uniform rate, except necessary food

FERRY COMMUTERS SEVERELY SHAKEN

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Hundreds of commuters were jostled and windows were broken when the ferry boat Klamath smashed into the side of a slip during a heavy fog here today. Nobody was injured.

Carrying passengers from Sausalito, the ferry was proceeding slowly through a dense fog that had descended upon San Francisco bay. Suddenly the slip loomed without warning and the ferry hit before it could be stopped.

Commuters were thrown off balance and considerable excitement resulted from the shock and the crash of breaking glass.

Beach City Sues Defunct Bank For Funds Deposited

$85,078 ASKED IN ACTION ON PUBLIC FUNDS

Charging that funds of the city of Newport Beach were deposited in the Bank of Balboa without adequate protection through posting of proper collateral and that the bank knew that the money was deposited there in violation of the statute covering deposit of municipal funds of the city of Newport Beach, and J. A. Gant as trustee of the city, and city treasurer has filed suit against Edward Rainey, as state banking superintendent and the Bank of Balboa for deposits totalling $85,078.81.

In addition to demanding judgment for the total amount of the city's deposit, the action is asking for an immediate payment of a 15 per cent dividend on the money deposited in the defunct bank and authority to hold such collateral as was given the city for security on the deposits until the entire amount is paid.

The suit filed yesterday afternoon includes six deposits covering a period from April 1, 1928, to January 21, 1932, when the assets of the bank were taken over by Rainey as state banking superintendent and the bank closed. The largest amount deposited, according to the suit, was $70,000.

According to the complaint, the money was deposited in the Bank of Balboa without the financial institution depositing "adequate or proper collateral of the amount and kind required as security for return of money deposited" under the law and that the money was received and held by the bank with the knowledge that it was in violation of the law.

Following closing of the bank on January 21, last, by Rainey, the treasurer of the city of Newport Beach filed claims for return of city funds deposited in the bank with interest from January 1, 1932, and claimed right of preference over all other creditors except those similarly situated. These claims, according to the suit were rejected by Rainey. It was also alleged that on September 1, last, Rainey paid a 15 per cent dividend to all depositors in the defunct bank with the exception of the city of Newport Beach.

RECLAMATION DEFENDED AS NATION POLICY

was cautiously worded. It suggested "sympathetic consideration" of congress of a proposal providing for an extension in payments of reclamation construction charges "commensurate with existing needs. We recommend this problem to congress in the belief it can and should be met in such a way as to maintain the ultimate integrity of the revolving fund."

Other important resolutions:

- 1—Endorsement of the principle of advancement by congress to the reclamation bureau's revolving fund.
- 2—Continuation of reclamation as a national policy.
- 3—Retention of the reclamation bureau as part of the interior department.
- 4—Urged further congressional loans to ensure continuation reclamation work.

REPEAL BILL IS INTRODUCED INTO SENATE

beer bill on the grounds that it would "nullify" the constitution.

So far as Garner and the Democratic house leadership is concerned, repeal is dead for this session, relegated to the Democratic and repealist congress coming into office on March 4. They feel the lame duck session has conclusively shown it will not sanction unqualified abolition of all federal liquor laws as pledged by the party platform. Democratic floor leader Rainey and some others feel a special session of the new congress is now inevitable.

Garner said that only if the senate passed a repeal resolution in line with the one defeated by the house would he make a second effort this session.

Democratic senators will meet Wednesday to determine their future course on the all absorbing prohibition issue. Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee is preparing to bring consideration of repeal in that group.

Another prohibition development in the senate was the proposal of Senator Tydings, Dem., Md., for a Volstead act amendment to legalize "light wines and beer" providing they are "non-intoxicating in fact."

HOOVER URGES SALES TAX IN ANNUAL REPORT

and possibly some grades of clothing.

In government economy, he pointed out that his budget message would recommend an additional 11 per cent pay cut on all salaries above $1000 a year. The result, with the present so-called payless furlough system, would be an average "14.5 per cent reduction in pay to those earning more than $1000."

He also intends to the budget message, he said, to recommend "measures to eliminate certain payments in the veterans' services," and added "many abuses have grown up from ill-considered legislation. They should be eliminated."

The president announced he intended to take advantage of his newly acquired power for widespread reorganization of the federal government, given in the last session of congress. He announced he would issue the necessary executive orders "within a few days grouping or consolidating over 50 executive and administration agencies."

This has long been a project near his heart. Unless congress reflects these forthcoming recommendations within 60 days, they become law.

The president amplified his demand for complete revision of the banking laws by declaring that "the shocks to our economic system have undoubtedly multiplied by the weakness of our financial system." He pointed out that in Great Britain "there has not been a single bank failure," but that bank failures in the United States "rose in 1931 to 10 1-2 per cent of all the banks."

Mr. Hoover emphasized his contention that the nation's economic ills were traceable mainly to the European collapse. He said:

"The unparalleled world wide economic depression has continued through the year. Due to the European collapse, the situation developed during the last fall and winter into a series of most acute crises. The unprecedented emergency measures enacted and policies adopted undoubtedly saved the country from an economic disaster. If we are to secure rapid and assured recovery and protection for the future, we must co-operate with foreign nations in many measures."

Debts Touched On

The president touched briefly on the war debts crisis: "The European governments, obligated to us in their debts, have requested that there should be suspension of payments due the United States on December 16 next, to be accompanied by exchange of views upon this debt question. Our government has informed them that we do not approve of suspension of the December 15 payments. I have stated that I would recommend to the congress methods to overcome temporary exchange difficulties in connection with this payment from nations where it may be necessary."

The president noted that the government was taking a leading part in world affairs, including the proposed world economic conference and the Geneva disarmament conference, and added:

"The welfare of our people is dependent upon successful issue of the great causes of world peace, world disarmament and organized world recovery."

In urging co-operation in world trade, Mr. Hoover said: "Currency depreciation and correlated forces have contributed greatly to decrease price levels. Moreover, from these origins rise most of the destructive trade barriers now stifling the commerce of the world. We could by successful action increase security and expand trade through stability in international exchange and monetary values."

Discussing legislative needs, the president said:

"I have placed various legislative needs before and these views require no amplification on this occasion. I have urged the need for reform in our transportation and power regulation, in the anti-trust laws as applied to our national resource industries, western range conservation, extension of federal aid to child-health services, membership in the world court, the ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway treaty, revision of the bankruptcy laws, revision of federal court procedure, and many other pressing problems."

Special Message

"These and other special subjects I shall where necessary deal with by special communications to the congress."

The president declared "The acute phases of the crisis have obviously passed." He praised the work of the Reconstruction Finance corporation which he said had "extended aid to nearly 6000 institutions," but said the R. F. C. was "manifestly but a temporary device" and could not "go on indefinitely."

He urged banking reforms, but warned that "inflation of currency or government conduct of banking can have no part in these reforms."

Mr. Hoover said there should be changes in general banking laws and also in the Federal Farm loan banking system and in the joint stock land banks. He said "some of these changes should be directed to permanent improvement and some to emergency aid to our people where they wish to fight to save their farms and homes."

"I wish again to emphasize this view—that these widespread banking reforms are a national necessity and are the first requisites for further recovery in agriculture and business. . . .

"Since Jan. 1, 1930, we have had 465 banks suspend, with $3,300,000,000 in deposits. Partly from tears and drains from abroad, partly from these failures themselves, we have witnessed hoarding of currency to an enormous sum, rising during the height of the crisis to over $1,600,000,000. The results from inter-reaction of cause and effect have expressed themselves in strangulation of credit which at times has almost stifled the nation's business and agriculture. . . .

"That this failure to function is unnecessary and is the fault of our particular system is plainly indicated by the fact that in Great Britain, where the economic mechanism has suffered far greater shocks than our own, there has not been a single bank failure during the depression."

While the president's message was being read the house presented a contrast to yesterday's crowded and excited session on prohibition repeal.

Only a handful of representatives were in their seats when the reading commenced, although more gradually staggered in. The galleries were virtually deserted.

The senate heard the message quietly. There was evidence neither of approval nor disapproval as John C. Ricketts, reading clerk, boomed out the words. Senator King, dem., Utah, took the opportunity to circulate on the republican side pulling senators' ears to attract their attention and then shaking hands.

Senator Long, dem., La., moved nervously around the chamber and in a few minutes after the message ended he had attained recognition and was denouncing "concentration of wealth."

1000 CHINESE OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS HELD

In the face of the unexpectedly light opposition, the Japanese fighting machine made remarkable progress toward the Siberian frontier. Airplanes played an important part.

The United Press learned from non-soviet sources that the Chinese flight began soon after Japanese concentrations opened an attack on Hailar, where Su Ping-Wen has massed most of his troops to resist the Japanese advance. Defeat of Su Ping-Wen's troops quickly turned the defense of Hailar into a rout.

OFFICERS NAMED BY GARDEN CLUB

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Dec. 6.—The Garden club at a meeting held in the chamber of commerce offices voted to continue the temporary officers selected six months ago, as permanent officers to serve for the ensuing year. The officers are J. Sherman Denny, president; Mrs. C. W. Patrick, vice president; Mrs. Viola Vidal, secretary; Miss Bertha Pann, treasurer.

The club membership has increased so rapidly that the Garden club now ranks as one of the largest in the city. Several new members were admitted at the last meeting. The club is organized to bring the lovers of homes and gardens and flowers together and to aid in beautifying the city. There are no membership dues and the only requirement for membership is to have any member of the club turn in the name of a new member into the secretary for enrollment.

Mr. Hosmer of the Hosmer nursery in Laguna Beach was the principal speaker at the meeting. He talked on bulbs and their culture. Mr. Hosmer was secretary of the National Bulb Growers' association for several years.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

-- News Behind the News --

WASHINGTON
By Paul Mallon

STALEMATE

This session of Congress can be marked down as a failure of government that will never happen again. The inside situation is President Hoover is not in sympathy with anything important that the Democratic House would like to do. The Democrats are likely to prefer to hold their big moves if possible until after March 4.

Mr. Hoover cannot sacrifice principle to sign measures he does not approve. Congressmen generally think the big Democratic majority elected in November ought to lay the plans for the future.

It is all due to the lame duck session intervening between elections and installations of new congresses. This practice will be abolished when 16 more state legislatures approve the lame duck amendment this year.

Cooperation flew out of the window when Gov. Roosevelt declined to be drawn into the war debt matter. The underlying situation has changed here since Mr. Hoover and his cabinet officials were privately very much put out about it. They aired their opinions fully in private conversations.

In Congress Republican leaders have given sincere personal assurances of cooperation. Yet the underlying situation is one of confusion. There appears to be a notable lack of partisan interest in what is to be done on anything save prohibition.

Nothing will be done that can be put off until March 4.

EUROPE

Norman Davis is having a hard time trying to play peacemaker in Europe nowadays.

His stealthy movements abroad have far greater importance than is generally known in this country. On his latest trip to Paris he had two private objects. First he wanted to work out a Franco-Italian naval accord. Secondly he wanted to get the Germans back in the disarmament conference.

Confidential diplomatic dispatches indicate he has met with no success in either move.

The truth of the matter is that Europe now is a hotbed of hatreds and fears. A man talking disarmament there now is wasting his time.

You may look for Norman to give up and come home for Christmas. Orders for his return were being discussed early this week in quarters capable of giving him orders.

FRANCE

The State Department will tell you the commercial treaty with France is three-fourths completed.

What they will NOT tell you is that the remaining fourth is the only important part of the treaty. It is evident that document is a long way from concluded although Ambassador Edge has devoted the year's work to it. Some of our less glib diplomats are beginning to agree that it looks as if France is playing a game with us.

It is increasingly evident that the French are using the commercial treaty issue to see what they can get on war debts.

MOVIES

Some of the movie big shots have been sounding out Washington sources for suggestions on a new car to replace Will Hays. Certain Senators and government officials shortly to be retired are under consideration. It seems the magnate want a business man this time instead of a moralist. They have had all the morals they are for and now are looking for someone who can put the industry on its feet.

They would like to get Mr. Hoover if they could but they have been informed he would not consider it.

HOOPER

Friends have been told by Mrs. Hoover that he wants to take a long rest after March 4. He has given no thought to looking for a job. Possibility that he might take the presidency of Stanford University is not being considered at this time.

Under no circumstances would he take anything before he gets in a well-deserved vacation.

WALKER

Secretary of (New York) State Edward J. Flynn's visit with Walker at the Riviera wasn't just social, according to the diplomatic grapevine. Jimmie felt peeved at the way he thought his friends let him down and threatened to get even by tearing the lid off some choice inside Tammany scandals in his forthcoming autobiography. Flynn was sent to dissuade him from doing anything so "foolish." It would be certain to bar him from a job which might save all wounds.

NOTES

Bernard Baruch has informed friends he does not expect to be in Washington after March 4. Mrs. Gann's seat will go unfilled on most occasions in the new Administration. Her successor Mrs. Garner plans to go to only one dinner, the White House dinner for the Vice President.

The fuzzy foursome of Senatorial golf is made up of Couzens, McNary, Pat Harrison and Hastings. You should hear the Millionaire Couzens yell when McNary wins a dime from him. Couzens does not mind giving millions for charity in Detroit but he hates the way McNary is dimming his fortune away.

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

LEGION

The National Economy League is getting under the American Legion's skin. National Commander Louis Johnson's verbal assault on Archie Roosevelt was a symptom. The Legion is taking the League seriously enough to alter its lobbying program. Instead of pressing for spot payment of the bonus Legion activities will be concentrated on preventing the elimination of any benefits now granted to veterans. An elaborate trench warfare is being prepared.

Paid members of the National Legion staff have had to accept a cut. There is a feeling in upper Legion circles that income from dues is going to take a drop and the pay cuts are an effort to forestall a deficit.

FUSION

The official fusion movement headed by Joseph M. Price to elect a New York mayor next year is having its troubles getting started. If Tammany puts through a sufficient number of economy gestures the essential financial and business elements are apt to say that their objective has been achieved an adieu to all the fuss and furor of a fight? To date at least the chief menace to Tammany's supremacy comes from within the City Democratic organization. McCooey of Brooklyn continues to hold the key.

PENSIONS

Comptroller Berry disclosed prematurely a tentative program plan to assess a temporary 10 per cent tax on the salaries of city employees instead of enforcing a formal pay cut. The idea would be to protect pension rights.

If the State Legislature permits a reduction in mandatory salaries there will probably be a flood of applications to retire on pension. Necessary replacements plus additional pensions would use up a lot more money than the cut would save.

TAXES

Semi-annual city tax collections came in surprisingly well toward the end of November. If the final figures hold to average the banks may not be able to put on their pressure act in December after all.

SOCIALISTS

The split in the Socialist party due to the poor showing in the election is assuming serious proportions. Norman Thomas and Waldman are on one side of the fence—Hillquit and his followers on the other. Thomas is in favor of making doctrinaire concessions to enlist the support of other groups which are frightened by the term Socialist. Hillquit is all for sticking to the party's guns. There is a possibility that the split may lead to the formation of a new liberal party. The first real test will come at the municipal election next year.

FARMERS

Financial leaders here are keenly interested in the "domestic allotment" plan to relieve the farmer. They understand that Roosevelt is giving it serious consideration. The plan provides a government subsidy for farmers who voluntarily agree to reduce their acreage—the subsidy to cover the difference between open market prices and actual cost of production, including mortgage interest, etc. For instance, if wheat were selling at 46c a bushel and the cost were figured at 80c the government would make up the 36c to cooperating farmers.

The subsidy is supposed to be paid from taxes on the processing of wheat (in the case of wheat) such as bread, breakfast cereals, etc. Informed opinion here doubts that such taxes could be exacted. The emotional values involved are certain to interfere with clear thinking. But it is felt that some such effort must be made to put farm purchasing power on a parity with industrial purchasing power when the upturn shows.

BEER

Among the stock market securities to which beer is expected to give a tilt are Owens Illinois Glass and General American Tins. The former will make about $2 a share this year. As prospects run, next year should show about $1.50. But if beer goes through there should be about $4 a share extra earned on the first year.

The tank car people scrapped 3000 beer carriers after prohibition came in. In the dairy trade and soft drink field they found new uses for cars and today have 3000 big-blue modern cars ready for the world. They can take on from 10 per cent to 20 per cent new business and have the bulk of it for the profit column. Beer will do the trick—and the brewers have already made their contracts. ## A. J. McFADDEN ON NEW R. F. C. CREDIT UNIT

A. J. McFadden, well known Santa Ana rancher, is planning to go to Los Angeles tomorrow to secure additional information on how farmers may apply for crop or livestock loans through the banking and industrial committee of the Twelfth Federal Reserve district.

The agricultural bank committee, to which McFadden has been appointed to represent the citrus industry in Orange county, has volunteered to give advice and suggestions to those seeking to secure loans for crop or livestock production purposes.

The Southland agriculturists hold an organization meeting recently in Los Angeles, discussing advising with individuals in the various communities as to sources of credit to meet their needs in the various communities as to sources of credit to meet their needs under emergency conditions. It was stated that members of the committee are anxious to extend their advisory service to those seeking to refinance real estate loans on homes or farms, but it was concluded that none of the emergency relief measures provided for such direct loans to individuals and that those in such need must still depend upon normal sources of credit.

Farmers in doubt as to how to apply for crop or livestock loans may feel free to call upon members of the committee in their respective districts. It was announced. The agricultural bank credit committee is a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Council Notes

Alex Valez, Delhi Mexican filed application with the council for permission to operate a pool hall in Delhi. The application was referred to the police department for investigation with instruction to report back in one week.

DOUBLE BILL AT WEST COAST LIKED

"One Way Passage" with Kay Francis and William Powell, and Adolph Menjou in a rare mystery murder story, "Night Club Lady," is showing today and tomorrow at the Fox West Coast theater.

The two pictures, both recent releases, have been highly praised, the murder story declared to be the best thing that Menjou has done in several years.

"One Way Passage" tells the story of a woman, fatally ill with heart trouble, going home from China to die. On board the ship she meets the only man she could ever love. He turns out to be an escaped murderer, being taken back to San Francisco and the gallows.

With only a few days of love they make the most of it in one of the most engrossing stories the screen has offered this year.

Word of 30 days starting Saturday. While he is away, Judge John Landell, of San Juan Capistrano will act as city judge. It was announced.

OFFICIALS OF NEW STORE

GRAND OPENING OF CLARK DOLLAR STORE IN SANTA ANA TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

Clark's Dollar Store, incorporated, said to be originators of the dollar store idea, open the twentieth unit of their rapidly growing chain at 103 West Fourth street, at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The new store will be launched with a grand opening sale, lasting from Wednesday through Saturday.

Clark's buyers from the home office in Los Angeles, working in conjunction with the New York buying office, have been scouring Eastern markets for suitable stocks to fit into a unit in a city of this size during the Christmas rush, store officials report.

In addition to purchasing merchandise for the grand opening sale, Clark's buyers have assembled thousands of items suitable for Christmas gifts. Believing that this will be a year of practical gifts, in keeping with the prevalent thrift tendency, Clark's is featuring necessities to sell at very low prices. Their slogan for gift buying is, "Make it a Dollar Christmas."

Store Remodeled
The location chosen by Clark's is one formerly occupied by the Merrill company. The building is being remodeled in accordance with the Clark idea of effective store equipment. The store will be thoroughly modernized to assure the utmost efficiency for both customers and the sales force.

The Clark chain, which is built on the ideal of giving "More for Your Dollar" has had a phenomenal growth in the 10 years since its founding. This growth is attributed by M. T. Shaw, president and general manager, to the Clark principle of exceptional quantities and values.

"The late A. J. Clark founded the first dollar store in the world in Long Beach in the fall of 1922," Shaw points out. "The small store started with only a few items, because in those days the dollar hadn't been identified as it has today with all sorts of cooperative and individual dollar events. Then, items of this class sold for a dollar and some odd cents."

Chain Grows Rapidly
"But Mr. Clark conceived the idea that if those items were bought in large enough quantities, and the cost of selling held down, they might be offered for as little as an even $1. And so the first 'Dollar Store' was born."

In the decade since, the Clark chain has grown by leaps and bounds. There are four stores in Los Angeles, two in the downtown district. Three more outlets are located in Northern California, and the same number in Texas. The other stores are located in Southern California cities neighboring to Los Angeles. The nineteenth unit was added Saturday in Alhambra. The local store is the only one in Orange county.

Clark's maintains a four-story home and buying office in Los Angeles and a buying office in New York.

Each store has its own bureau of standards where all merchandise is examined carefully to be sure that it is first quality. Any that does not meet Clark's rigid standard, is rejected.

Roy Zell, buyer, is in charge of the Santa Ana opening.

Is it their lot to suffer cramps and backaches every month? Certainly not. The tonic effect of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has ended all that for many thousands of women.

Mrs. Schaeffer's case is typical. She was always sickly, tired, gloomy. "Now," she says, "everywhere I go people tell me how much better I look. I feel like dancing for joy all the time."

RACE SUICIDE TO BE TOPIC AT MEET HERE

Frank C. Reed, of the Human Betterment foundation, will address an open public meeting in the Frances Willard Junior High school auditorium tomorrow at 7:30 p. m., speaking on "Quantity or Quality in Race Suicide."

A recent publication of the foundation declared that "Strong, intelligent, useful families are becoming smaller and smaller. Irresponsible, diseased, defective parents on the other hand do not limit their families correspondingly. There can be but one result. That result is degeneration. When families that send a child to an institution for the feebleminded average twice as large as families that send a child to the university. It is time for society to act."

Reed will provide information based on a critical study of eugenic measures employed in California and elsewhere over a 30 year period.

The speaker is to come here through the courtesy of the Institute of Family Relations, directed by Dr. Paul Popenoe, and has been secured by the Orange county unit of the state organization for public health nursing.

START SEARCH FOR DAUGHTER OF GUN VICTIM

Coroner Earl Abbey of Orange county today appealed to newspapers throughout the Southland in an effort to locate the daughter of J. W. Johnston, 55, rancher of Atwood, and former railroad construction engineer, who killed himself Sunday night.

Other than the fact that the woman's name is Mrs. Laura Lopez, nothing is known about her. Friends of Johnston were of the opinion, they told the coroner that the daughter lived somewhere in southern California. No inquest into the death of Johnston will be held. He shot himself just below the heart with a pistol Sunday afternoon, dying at the Fullerton general hospital at 4:30 a. m. Monday. Ill and tired of living Johnston shot himself, he told officers before he died. Johnston was well known throughout Southern California as one of the few trainers of trick horses. Five horses which he had been training were found in the barn on his two and a half acre ranch. No funeral arrangements have been made.

BLUE MONDAY PROGRAM FOR KREG TONIGHT

There is hardly a radio listener on the west coast who has not tuned in on the Blue Monday Jamboree and enjoyed it. Now a special treat is here for the Orange county listeners. Tonight at 6:15 over radio KREG the Blue Monday Jamboree will entertain during the Fox Broadway theater broadcast.

This group including Tommy Harris, Donakes and Donakes, Murray and Harris, Pedro Gonzalez, "Mac," the Noodlebugs, have been in Santa Ana for several days and have presented a group of impromptu programs at the theater where they are appearing in person.

Through the courtesy of the Fox Broadway theater this group of talented artists will present one of their programs tonight during the broadcast by direct wire from the theater.

Later in the evening another talented group of artists will present a contrasting program on the Sunshine Music club period starting at 8 o'clock.

Included in this group of artists will be Miss Florine Pollock, vocal soloist; Miss Lois Dunham, reader; Miss Irene Journekan, Miss Lois Smith, Richard Kerley, and William Hampton, instrumentalists.

KREG NOTES

Dr. James Workman Santa Ana chiropractor will talk tonight on "Kidney Trouble." This is one of his most important lectures, according to Dr. Workman. "Every one should listen to this lecture," he said, "as kidney trouble often progresses to a very advanced stage before the individual becomes aware of it."

The "flu" has hit artists of radio KREG. This week Kai's Hallwalls are taking an enforced vacation because of illness.

Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York presents Jack Hylton and his orchestra tonight from 7:30 to 8 o'clock. This popular orchestra will play "Just a Gigolo," "Taraaaa," "You," "With a Song in My Heart," and other favorites.

RADIO FEATURES

Time References Are Pacific Standard Time

F. Melius Christensen's arrangement of "Lost in the Night," a Finnish folk song, will be sung by the Westminster choir, of Princeton, New Jersey, tomorrow when that organization appears in another of its half-hour broadcasts for NBC listeners from coast to coast at 11:29 a. m. The spiritual, "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel," by Harry T. Burleigh will be sung by the male chorus. David Hugh Jones' "God is a Spirit" also will be a high light of the program. "Laughing Spring" a round, will add variety to the weekly concert. KFSD will release the program.

Professor Arthur W. Bromage, University of Michigan; Professor Leonard D. White, University of Chicago, and Dr. Louis D. Upson of the Detroit bureau of government research, will be the principal speakers on the program You and Your Government, to be heard over an NBC transcontinental network including KECA and KFSD at 5 o'clock this evening. The subject of their discussion will be "Reorganizing County Government."

The entire "Symphony in C Major," or "The Jupiter," the last symphony of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, will be played by the Eastman School Little Symphony over an NBC network, including KECA at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The reason for the term Jupiter is unknown, but by common consent it was so named because of its dignity and loftiness as compared with his other symphonies. The orchestra is composed of members of the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity and will be conducted by Karl Van Hoesen.

PARIS LOVE

by NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS.

Since the death of her husband ten years previously, Kate Sawyer had made $60,000,000 by continuing the manufacture in France of the now famous American motor car. Alfred Santini, whom she knew only as a gigolo and a driver of racing cars, and who was in constant attendance on her, was the chief of a gang of jewel thieves. Ramon Cabero and Etienne Lejard, assistants at Piron's jewelry shop, were members of his gang. Mrs. Sawyer's daughter Alacia had recently fallen in love at first sight with Armand de Pas, Prince d'Orsant, poverty-stricken pretender to the French throne. He was a sales- man at Piron's, learning the business. Santini induced Mrs. Sawyer to have her fabulous jewels reset and while they were at Piron's one of his gang substituted imitations, and put the real rubies in the tool box of the Europa racer. Santini was to drive in the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo. Armand was arrested because he had handled the rubies, but M. Piron gave bond. A jealous girl told Alacia that Santini was going to throw the Monte Carlo race. Several clues led Alacia to believe he had the rubies when he started for Monaco. Armand agreed to drive Alacia's exact duplicate or Santini's racer in the Grand Prix and in this car they left Paris in pursuit. Just as they reached Monte Carlo he disappeared mysteriously after turning into a little blind street. The next day Santini went to see Alacia and said her entering of a second car in the race reflected on him. "I'm sorry you are so sensitive," Santini, Alacia said.

"Very well," said Santini. "I have tried to be friendly. But have it your own way. All I can say further is that I am sorry for what you have done and think that you will be sorry also." When the door had shut behind him Alacia and Armand looked at each other questioningly.

"That's a threat!" said the girl. "It's rather awkward for him, you must admit," said Armand. "I mean if the Sunray people really bought him to throw the race. They'll have a hard time buying me as well," he added grimly. "And the beggar knows it. Shouldn't wonder if my entry hasn't already spoiled his bargain for him."

"And in the meanwhile," said Alacia, "I'd like to know what he's done with those rubies?"

Whatever Santini had done with them, they were certainly no longer in the car, so far as she could tell the following morning when the projected photographs were taken. Santini preserved a sulky deference of manner during the proceeding to which Alacia had gone alone, but she suddenly felt the effort had been useless. The tool-box stood wide open as though deliberately left so for her inspection, and Santini's mechanic got out a bit of rag to do some wholly unnecessary polishing of the metal-work before the camera was ready. Once she caught Santini grinning at her, sardonically, as though the open box had been a well-planned joke. She felt helpless and baffled, but unconvinced. Even the appearance, at luncheon time, of two very competent looking detectives bearing an introduction from M. Jessant failed to do anything except add to her sense of having made a fool of herself. Yet Armand's report on the Carassone Garage renewed her suspicions.

"He had the car in there for only an hour!" Armand informed her at lunch time. "Said he was going to put it in, but never came back with it. And none of the other first-class places know where he keeps it. I've had a fine job, making my inquiries without arousing suspicion, and it certainly is damned queer that he should actually hide the car itself!"

"If no longer foot there is the slightest chance of the jewels and the car being connected," she told him wearily. "At times the whole incident seems absurd and I feel that I acted on a mistake. I've brought you on a wild goose chase, my dear!"

"I hope not!" he said. "Suppose they call me for trial in Paris and I have nothing to show but a series of hotel receipts from towns across country? That will look what you call, not so warm! Besides if Santini has not got a reason for keeping that car out of our reach, why does he hide it? Furthermore, where does he hide it? One doesn't put a thing that size in one's pocket, and I haven't forgotten how he made it vanish like a rabbit into a hat."

"There wasn't even any hat left," she reminded him. "If we could only get a good look at the place he keeps it, we might know a lot more than we do now."

An hour later de Pas was climbing into the car which he had driven down from Paris. He had put on the regulation driving clothes which he would wear tomorrow, to wit white overalls and headpiece of closely woven toile and large goggles, for the wind on the upper Corniche road where he intended giving the Europa her final tryout, was heavy. The mechanic who had been working on the car ever since its arrival jumped in beside him, and they were off.

The day was beautiful and the car ran to perfection, the thousand mile from Paris having given it just the breaking-in it needed; and for the moment all Armand's thoughts centered on tomorrow's race. The big golden cup, he hoped devoutly, would be only the first trophy he was going to lay at Alacia's feet. He must get it for her—he must! Hers was the only applause he craved; her pleasure in victory for the car which, as he knew, meant so much to her, the only reward he desired. Responding to his lightest thought as it did, the car appeared to be alive and consciously co-operating with him. Then after a highly satisfactory hour's run he turned back towards Monte Carlo. Dusk was falling and the little principality jutting out into the purple sea was jeweled with lights, incredibly, fantastically beautiful and unreal. There was music in the open restaurant of the Cafe de Paris, and the whole town, decked with the Prince of Monaco's arms and colors in honor of the forthcoming race, presented an air of carnival. As they drove down into the main thoroughfare the mechanic addressed him with a reminder.

"Pardon, mon prince," said he, "but you have no number on the car as yet!"

"Zut! but you are right!" exclaimed Armand. "Rather important, that! Where is the atelier where the chap paints them on, do you know?"

"It is up the rue des Bretagnes, a little further along on the left," said the mechanic. "I can take the car there as soon as you return to the hotel, mon prince."

"We will go now," said Armand pleasantly. "I like to see those fellows work."

"Yes, mon prince," murmured the man. "It is a skillful métier!" The paint shop in the rue des Bretagnes was down a narrow side street, rather less well lit than is the rule in the spotless little city. Several cars in various stages of redecoration stood on the floor, but it was late and the workers had left for the day. The big shadowy room smelled pleasantly of turpentine and body-polish and the sweet oil which is mixed in caulking-cement, and the lights on the main floor had been turned off, although one still burned in the little office. Armand parked in the semi-darkness of the disorderly work floor, and the mechanic jumped out.

"I'm afraid it's too late!" remarked Armand, but the mechanic was insistent in his denial.

"Non, mon prince!" he said. "I know the place well, and it is never too late for Bernard, not on the night before a race! He's left the boy in charge while he is upstairs having his supper, and naturally the boy has played monkey! Just a moment, I will find him!" The man strode off through a little door on the far side of the building. Hardly had he gone when Armand became conscious of a presence behind him. He had not moved in his seat even to lift the heavy goggles he was still wearing over the close fitting dust-cap, and he certainly had heard no sound of an approach. Yet there was undoubtedly someone there, close behind him. A quick sideways glance revealed the figure of a man standing motionless in the darkness not far away. Then before Armand could cry out or move, the mysterious figure spoke.

"Santini!" said a low voice. "Armand was paralyzed with surprise, but for a moment only. Then he collected his wits sufficiently to refrain from speaking and to nod his head with a cautioning gesture. The figure leaned nearer.

"I recognized the car," he whispered quickly, "and I had to speak to you. It seemed a good moment, since you had warned me to keep away from the house. Everything is arranged. I have the necessary car—papers for Italy, and you will leave the jewels just where they are in the upholstery behind your own seat. Make no attempt to remove them my friend, because you are being carefully watched. If you linger in the garage for one moment after putting the car in tonight, or attempt to stay there until the corner comes for you! Understand that well! The city is alive with eyes and they are all upon you. More, you personally must not attempt to cross the border, for there are two headquarters men from Paris in town. Go back to the boulevards on the first possible train. It looks better. Do you understand?" Armand nodded, and the man seemed satisfied for he went on hurriedly.

"Immediately after the race," said he, "I will come up to you wearing your mechanic's clothes and you will drive the car over to me. I'll hand it to Genoa. Lejard will take it to Genoa, and all arrangements."

At the sound of Lejard's name Armand could not suppress a little sound of amazement. But his mysterious informant did not seem surprised at this.

"He arrived only this morning and the flicks are hot on his trail," he added in explanation. "He's got to get out of the country and the car is the best way. He's dug up an Italian passport, and he's got to use it before they notify the border. Alors, Santini, let me remind you that if so much as a stone is missing, well, you know what Charlie looked like when they found him in the Seine! Tomorrow then, after the race, look for a red and white number five mechanic!"

Someone was coming down the staircase behind the door across the shop. There was a sound of rough voices laughing and talking, and Bernard, the painter, entering first, switched on the light. But quickly as he did so, the man who had whispered out of the darkness had been swifter, for even as Armand turned to look he was gone. How far? Would he linger to overhear what happened next? De Pas swung a long leg over the side of the car and went to glance into the dim street outside. Fifty feet away a shadow was moving close to the wall. It reached the boulevard and melted into the crowd upon the thoroughfare and Armand came back satisfied that the creature, whoever he was, had gone.

"SO HAPPY THAT I TRIED ALL-BRAN"

Delicious Cereal Brought Relief From Constipation

If you have headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read Mrs. Schneider's letter:

"Since I have been eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, I don't have to take anything else for constipation. How good it is, and how much better it is for constipation than pills or any other medicine.

"I would never go back to what I used to take, because Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is wholesome and healthful."

—Mrs. John Schneider, 950 Tenth Street, Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Constipation is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN has both, as well as iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the wastes.

Try ALL-BRAN in place of pills and drugs—so often habit-forming. Two tablespoons daily will overcome most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal, or in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Newport Beach Employees Placed On Five Day Week

COUNCIL MAKES CHANGE IN CITY WATER RATES

NEWPORT BEACH, Dec. 6.—With the council chambers filled, Newport Beach city councilmen last night milled through an extra long list of projects, requests, and resolutions.

Chief among them was a resolution that all city employees be put on a five-day week basis. Despite written protests from resident citizens and also from those having summer homes here but who are at present living elsewhere, the resolution was unanimously adopted, all councilmen being present and voting. It has been mutually agreed among those interested, that where emergency work is necessary, the city's unemployed will be used in so far as city funds are available.

Wine Applications
A half dozen individuals and taverns put in applications for the right to sell light wines and beer in their various establishments. Those making application were T. Carson of the Star Cafe, Pinster of the Blue Bird Cafe, George Cardin of the Sea Shell Cafe, George Cardin of the Corona Del Mar and Willard T. O'Connell, West Newport. The matter was referred to City Attorney Roland Thompson, who gave immediate reply that as soon as the city ordinance of long standing will go into effect which is even more stringent than the Wright act, Attorney Thompson further commented that the present ordinance can not be repealed except by a vote of the people of the city.

Considerable interest was drawn when the city engineer and the city attorney reported on the matter of dredging the channel north of Lido Isle so that it might be used as a speed course when so ever arranged for. After a report by the city engineer as to the probable cost of the project and the interpretation of the state law on the operation of such courses, the matter was filed away for future consideration, due to the fact that at present the cost of opening up the channel would be prohibitive and also that the state laws governing the operation of such courses is so stringent that the channel could not be used as such. The project was protested vigorously by residents in the neighborhood.

The oil refinery site cleanup proposition was brought to the attention of the council again last night by the executive board of the West Newport Improvement association, O. H. Burke, Ralph Maskey and Helen Coffin. Owing to the fact that the property involved is in the hands of a receiver at present, nothing can be done about it by the city, according to a statement made by the city attorney.

Water Rates Changed
Following up the requests for certain changes in the city's water ordinance, that have been before the council for the past several

Plan Double Program In Yorba Linda

YORBA LINDA, Dec. 6.—Under direction of Mrs. J. H. Enright and Mrs. Margaret Cram of the primary and junior departments, and of the Yorba Linda drama club, with Miss Maybelle Gale directing, a double program is scheduled for Christmas celebration for the Yorba Linda Methodist Sunday school for December 23 at the church.

The primary and junior departments will conduct their program separately, and a play, presented by feminine players, will be given by the drama section.

A resolution was adopted particularly rearranging the water rate charges which will be beneficial to the water users of the city. One application for water service outside of the city limits was denied.

A resolution presented by the League of California municipalities, asking for a greater percentage of the gas tax fund for the municipalities of the state, was unanimously approved by the council.

A protest as to certain taxes levied against property owned on Balboa Island, and used as a children's home by the Masonic lodge, was referred to the city attorney and assessor, to be reported on at the next meeting. Applications, one for a lease on the Newport Beach ocean pier for a boat landing by C. E. McFarland, and another for the operation of a cafe by Ruth E. McClain, were referred to the proper authorities to be reported on at the next council meeting.

PLAY PRESENTED IN BALBOA CHAPEL

NEWPORT BEACH, Dec. 6.—A newly organized auxiliary to the local W. F. M. S., the Standard Bearers, composed of a group of young women Sunday School workers of Christ-by-the-Sea, and a number of college girls, held their first important meeting in the Balboa chapel Sunday afternoon to an interested audience, giving as the main number on the program, a one-act play, "Ling Lee." Those taking part were the Misses Alma Graves, Lyla Davis, Jeannette Bodman, Marian Dickey, Lailah Cherry and Julia Fischer. The play depicts the missionary work in China.

Miss Dorothy Ensign gave as a part of the afternoon program a review of the work, "Lady Fourth Daughter." Refreshments were served to all present by the refreshment committee, the Misses Jeannette Wells, Lorene Shafer and Dorothy Blue.

Miss Lyla Davis, the president of the body, presided. Miss Julia Fischer is secretary of the organization.

BEACH BOARD GETS PETITION ON P. O. SITE

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Dec. 6.—The city council in regular meeting last night received a petition signed by 106 taxpayers asking that eight lots at the southeast corner of Olive and Main streets be selected as the site for the proposed new $80,000 federal post office. Mayor Elison G. Conrad in discussing the petition before the council, stated that the selection of a post office site was not within the province of the council, that the matter rested with the federal government post office and treasury departments.

Opposed To Bonds
Mayor Conrad said the council had tendered a proposed site to the government as a free gift, and that this action had been taken in accordance with promises made many months ago. He said that the city council would not countenance a bond issue to purchase a post office site, nor would it be seemly or proper for the council to undertake expenditure of public funds for any site for a federal post office. He then announced that unless the council objected he would order the petition placed on file. The councilmen offered no objections.

City Clerk C. R. Furr read a letter signed by H. T. Sherwood, executive officer of the treasury department of the United States government, acknowledging the receipt of a letter from the city council, tendering the Triangle park post office site to the government. Mr. Sherwood stated that the matter would be referred along with other similar proposals to the proper department to be acted upon at the proper time.

Unemployed Get $75
Harry Stevenson, secretary of the Workers' Unemployment committee, appealed to the council for payment of the first $75, a weekly allowance from the city council to the unemployed, who in turn gave the city 75 days work a month at the rate of $4 a day.

Secretary Stevenson, in a talk given followed by the workers in an effort to provide food for the unemployed. He told of donations of corn from farms, the corn to be ground into meal and of the manner by which the 75 days' work was contributed by the men. He urged that the $75 weekly be paid to M. A. Turner, treasurer of the committee, who has succeeded Willis H. Warner as treasurer. Mr. Warner having resigned. The council voted to allow the $75 as requested.

Three Liquor Applications
Applications for liquor permits were received from Mrs. Cecily Oliver of the Coffee Cup cafe; M. E. and Betty Stanley of the Stanley hotel; J. O. Lorentz of the Rotary cafe, the permits to become effective or to issue as soon as the proper government or state authority for selling light wines and beer had been granted. The council placed all applications on

NEWPORT BASEMENT USED FOR OFFICES

NEWPORT BEACH, Dec. 6.—A move that will net the city of Newport Beach a saving of approximately $65 per month has been made in the moving of the drafting branch of the city engineer's office into the city hall. The basement of the city hall has been remodeled and cleaned up and will be used as office space in the future, the city attorney's office occupying rooms there also.

LIQUOR LAWS DISCUSSED AS COUNCIL MEETS

PLACENTIA, Dec. 6.—On advice of the city attorney Placentia councilmen agreed that their laws for control of sales and traffic in liquors will hold until the Orange County League of municipalities has acted and presented a uniform law, it was determined at a meeting last night at the city hall, where all officials were present to discuss city problems.

Extension of Melrose street northward to the city limits was decided. A plea of Johnston and Wickett for closing of the streets through their property on Chapman and Bradford avenue, streets that are not in use, will be considered after more maps have been presented at a later meeting for the councilmen to study. The plea of Johnston and Wickett was to return their lots to acreage. The Johnston-Wickett plea was presented through C. W. Hyde of Santa Ana.

Consideration was given to placing two fire hydrants on Crowther avenue, for protection of packing houses and buildings adjacent. If plans carry, one hydrant will be placed on Melrose and Crowther and one at Evelyn and Crowther.

A request of M. D. Clay that councilmen consider that West Santa Fe avenue is settled adequately for paving was heard, with no action taken. Councilmen also heard Clay's request to consider advice on his circulating a petition for a municipally owned water plant. At the previous meeting the councilmen tabled the petition of Clay's until a report had been received from the railroad commission on change of rates.

NEW TRIAL DUE AS LIQUOR CASE JURY DISAGREES

TUSTIN, Dec. 6.—A new trial for Mrs. Selma Otero, of 206 San Juan street, on a charge of possession, was set today for January 18, after a jury trying her case failed to agree yesterday. In Judge D. ## OLINDA OIL WORKER SUES FOR $52,240

Damage totalling $52,240 for injuries received when his automobile was involved in a crash near Olinda with another car driven by W. D. Solbee, are sought in a damage suit filed in superior court by Frank E. Hartwick, Olinda oil worker.

Hartwick was injured April 26, last, when, according to his complaint, Solbee drove his car through the intersection of Richfield road and Buena Vista avenue at a reckless speed and failed to stop at a boulevard stop sign placed at the intersection.

In the crash Hartwick received a fractured skull and concussion of the brain in addition to other injuries. The skull injuries, according to his complaint have dulled his mentality, caused headaches, dizziness and spells of amnesia, in addition to causing uncertainty of temper and suicidal tendencies. He also alleges that because of the accident his powers of locomotion are uncertain.

Hartwick is suing for $50,000 actual damages and $2,240 special damages.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 pounds until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 pounds. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast — it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at McCoy Drug Co., 2 stores, Kelley's Drug Co., Ltd., or any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.—Adv.

New Dried Fruit Industry Started In Orange County

PERSIMMON
EXPERIMENTS
PROVE SUCCESS

Experiments started last year, today apparently had been proven a success and leaders in the move to dehydrate persimmons now are anticipating a big future for the product which is new to Orange county and California.

Following a little experimental work done last year, both Harry W. Lewis of East Fourth street, and George J. Bauer, of Orange, this season dehydrated 2500 pounds of persimmons, packed them in pound packages wrapped in cellophane and distributed them to learn if the new product was to prove popular. The fruit for the dried persimmons was picked fully matured and was ripened at the Southern Orange County Persimmon Growers' association plant and were packed at the Central Lemon association house at Tustin. The ripening process takes about four days.

Now On Sale
When in a favorable eating condition, the fruit was cut in quarters or halves, laid on trays and placed in the dehydrator for two or three days at a temperature of from 150 to 155 degrees.

The dried persimmons for about 100 years, but this is the first instance of drying persimmons in the United States, as far as is known. The product has been placed on sale in several places and has proved to be very popular. It is reported that most persons who do not like ripe persimmons have expressed a fondness for the dried fruit. Well known growers such as C. E. Utt, Sherman Stevens and Dr. C. D. Ball have been enthusiastic in their predictions for the success of the venture.

Utilizes Surplus
Drying persimmons will do a great deal to conserve the surplus grown in Orange county and other places in the state, and will also save from 15 to 20 per cent of the fruit which has scratches or marks on the skins. It will result in the relieving of the market of second grade fruit as well, it was said.

Before the fruit is placed in the air proof packages, it is dipped in boiling water for two minutes to soften the fruit. The fruit will keep the year around.

The local persimmon association shipped between 800 and 900 tons of fruit in car lots to eastern cities this year which were sold at auction through the California Fruit Exchange of Sacramento. The McFadden, Walker and Irvine ranch of 150 acres interest with oranges and persimmons produced about half of the Orange county crop.

LIFE STORY OF
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

By
Leland M. Ross and Allan W. Grobin

(This intimate story of the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, beginning with the time his father took him as a 3-year-old to call on his close friend, Grover Cleveland, then President of the United States, carries the reader through an interesting biography in the family farm at Hyde Park, N. Y., his student days at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School, and the development of his political career, which began with a New York State Senate nomination in 1910. Recent instalments told of F. D.'s courageous fight against the after-effects of infantile paralysis, and of the work of the Warm Springs Foundation for cripples, which he established in Georgia after deriving great benefits from the baths there. He had again taken an active part in the practice of law, business and politics, and for the third time had gone before the Democratic national convention to urge the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for the Presidency, this time successfully. Now Smith and the New York Democrats wanted Roosevelt to accept the nomination for Governor of New York to bolster the national ticket.)

INSTALMENT 19

The Democratic state convention was actually in session in Rochester, N. Y., and no nominee was in sight! Surely there was some way to win Franklin D. Roosevelt over to candidacy.

Alfred E. Smith went to Mrs. Roosevelt, who was also at the convention. Tall, grave-faced, calm in what she saw as the crisis of her husband's career, she maintained strict neutrality.

"I feel this is Franklin's own problem," she said. "But he can be elected!" "I'm not trying to influence him either way," she said. Smith took heart.

"Do you think he would run if we nominated him anyway?" "I can't tell you more than you already know," she said. "My husband is a determined man."

His health, she told Smith, was excellent except for the need of the brace.

Then it was that Smith, in his desperation, made a momentous decision. He would telephone to Georgia and ask "Frank" once more!

He tried that morning . . . but Roosevelt could not be reached. Evening came and still no Roosevelt. The convention was waiting to hear the Happy Warrior speak. "Al" gave up the call for the time, resolving to try again after his visit to the convention hall.

Through wildly cheering crowds he rode to the hall—tired and worried, but smiling upon his worshippers. In his address that night he proved his right to the "Happy Warrior" title. Weariness and received their returns for this year's crop. Prices, it was said, are better than they were last year.

worry were stowed far in the back of his mind as he thundered his message to the delegates. It was a battle cry—a justification of F. D.'s earlier words at Houston: ". . . one who not only deserves victory but commands it!"

On that memorable morning of October first, Roosevelt—in Warm Springs—had gone down to the pool for his morning swim. A messenger from the hotel accosted him in the midst of his exercises.

Someone from Rochester, N. Y., wanted to speak to him on the telephone.

"I'm sorry," said F. D., "but I can't come now. I can't permit my exercises to be interrupted."

When he was dressed, Roosevelt drove away in an automobile for an all-day picnic with Warm Springs friends. Early in the evening he went to the neighborhood of Manchester, Ga., to address a mass meeting in behalf of Smith and Robinson. While he was speaking, a messenger from the telephone exchange passed a note up to him:

Governor Smith in Rochester HAD to speak to him.

When his speech had been delivered, Roosevelt went to the telephone. But the connection was so poor that he could not understand what "Al" was trying to say to him. He told the operator he would go back to Warm Springs and take the call there.

It was midnight when he completed the six-mile drive . . . In a cramped telephone booth in the Warm Springs hotel, he heard Smith's voice at last.

When Candidate Alfred E. Smith rode back through the crowd, shouting thousands in Rochester to the Hotel Seneca, he was a tired man, indeed. With perspiration from his rigorous address—body aching with fatigue—heart pounding with excitement.

What would "Frank" decide? In the hotel suite the disconsolate Democratic leaders were gathered. Smith went directly to the bath, took a shower and emerged, refreshed, in his bathrobe.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I've a little telephoning to do."

With that he retired to the privacy of his bedroom to call Roosevelt. There were long delays. But finally, at forty-five minutes past midnight, he was in communication with the man in the hotel booth in Georgia.

The old, old argument began all over again. Smith insisting . . . Roosevelt asking him to understand Smith's refusal. Finally Governor Smith asked point-blank: "Will you let me present your name to the convention?"

"No," said F. D.

"Will you let the convention nominate you?"

"No."

"If the convention nominates you anyway, will you decline to run?"

For long moments Roosevelt did not answer; and the thousand miles of wire between the two men seemed to hum with suspense.

"That's an unfair question, Al," said Roosevelt, at last. "You're hitting below the belt."

"Thanks, Frank," said Smith, his voice fairly leaping; and he hung up the receiver with a click of finality.

In the hotel bedroom, Alfred E. Smith still in his bathrobe, sighed with relief. The old, happy confidence flashed from his eyes. A few minutes later he went to the room where the leaders waited. They looked up as he opened the door, all eyes questioning.

"I have some good news," said "Al" with his accustomed love for the dramatic. "Franklin D. Roosevelt will be your candidate for governor."

There was a moment of stillness. In ten minutes a completely new spirit dominated the group; and they rapidly completed plans for battle. The Republicans were almost certain to nominate Albert Ottinger. Very well, with Roosevelt they would run Colonel Herbert H. Lehman. They would renominate United States Senator Royal S. Copeland. And go forth to beat the Republicans in both state and nation!

Down in Georgia the tall Roosevelt sank into his favorite wicker chair, once more to consider his situation. His face was serious. "In the end," he mused, "the man seems obliged to do what his friends want him to do."

When the convention re-opened that morning at 9:30 o'clock, the delegates, in a tumult of unanimity, nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for governor; and when on

NEW R. R. CZAR IS NEPHEW OF
SANTA ANA MAN

Harry Guy Taylor, recently selected to iron out the disputes and attempt to increase the profits of the 20 railroads in the western half of the nation, is a nephew of Wesley A. Taylor, 2410 Bonnie Brae street, and is well known in Santa Ana.

The new "railroad czar" has visited Santa Ana on many occasions as the guest of his uncle and became well acquainted with the city's business men through appearance as principal speaker before many of the service clubs.

With the title of Commissioner, Taylor will take up his duties December 15 with headquarters in Chicago. Chiefly his job will be to rule in matters of rates and train schedules.

Taylor was selected for the important post after presidents of the western roads had conferred for four months before reaching an agreement. Then a committee composed of C. R. Gray, of the Union Pacific, L. W. Baldwin of the Missouri Pacific, Ralph Budd of the Burlington, Charles Donnelly of the Northern Pacific, Fred W. Sargent of the Chicago and North-western, and H. A. Scandrett of the Milwaukee appointed him, Taylor's power in the financially distressed railroad world will be large, and all the western lines have agreed to accept his rulings as final.

W. A. Taylor, uncle of the newly appointed railroad commissioner, said that his nephew is a small-town boy from Nebraska with a career that offers an ideal background for a successful regime as mediator for the western railroads.

Included in his experience is that of a newspaper publisher and legislator as well as that of a railroad expert. His present position, which he is leaving to take up the railroad commissionership, is manager of public relations for the car service department of the American Railway association.

October 3 Mayor James J. Walker referred to Smith and Roosevelt "standing side by side, one at the head of the nation and the other at the head of the state," the roar of applause shook the rafters.

When momentary quiet had been restored, a telegram from Georgia was read.

"Every personal and family consideration," it stated, "has been and is against my becoming the candidate of the convention, but if by accepting I can help the splendid cause of our beloved governor, I will yield to your judgment. I will continue in this campaign to do everything possible for the state and national ticket. If elected I shall give my best services to the maintenance of the high example set during all these years by Governor Smith and to the furtherance of the cause of good government in the State of New York."

"Franklin D. Roosevelt," F. D. opened his campaign at Binghamton, N. Y., October 17th. From that day until November, he spoke at least once every day—often he spoke as many as twelve times. It was the Dutchess county senator all over again . . . or the campaigner of 1920! Traveling by automobile, he covered an average of 175 miles a day; his attack was as savage and direct as any he had ever made in all his virile political career.

Casting all thought of his own candidacy to the winds, he rushed to the defense of Smith against Ku Kluxers and against those who whispered that "Al" was unfit—denouncing them as the most cowardly liars.

He made countless radio addresses, spoke before every imaginable sort of gathering, traveled tirelessly day after day—and at the conclusion of a hard journey he was invariably the freshest member of his party.

"If I could campaign another six months," he declared, "I could throw away my cane. It has helped me."

Interesting indeed was the message he had for the electorate. He said of Smith:

He has the two great qualities of dignity and simplicity of heart which go with great men. I wish that all of you might see, as I have seen, the fine family life of the Governor and Mrs. Smith and their children—and now their grandchildren, too. If you seek right living, it is there, and a lot of frolic and fun too—a typical American family life of which we

MISSIONARY WHO TRANSLATED
NEW TESTAMENT INTO INDIAN
DIALECT TELLS EXPERIENCES

Completing translation of the New Testament into the Cakchiquel Indian dialect after nine years of unremitting labor, and seeing that book read by people who had never before read their own language, W. Cameron Townsend, and his wife, missionaries in Guatemala, have returned to Santa Ana on sick leave, to regain health lost in their efforts to help the Central American Indian to help himself.

Townsend, a former Santa Ana resident and graduate of the high school here, has spent the past 15 years in mission work among the Guatemalan Indians. Returning to Santa Ana with his wife for an indefinite period, he said that he feels that his work in the Central American republic has been successful.

Government Aids
In addition to publishing his translation of the New Testament which was completed in October, 1929, while Townsend was here on a furlough, he has gained approval of the Guatemalan government for his translation, been instrumental in starting schools where the Indians are taught to read their own language and succeeded in having the government print a primer of his own preparation to assist in teaching the Indians to read.

Two years ago Townsend came to Santa Ana and brought with him Trinidad Bae and Joe Chicol, Guatemalan Indians, who had worked with him for nine years translating the New Testament into the Indian language. While here and at a jubilee service of the First Presbyterian church, the final translated word was added and the work declared completed.

Teaches Indians
More than a year ago the American Bible society published

The New Testament, as translated by Townsend, in the Cakchiquel Indian dialect.

The party would visit a native town and remain for two weeks or a month conducting school where the natives were given instructions and special students given detailed instructions that enabled them to carry on the teaching work after the party's departure.

Townsend said that the aptitude of the Indians for reading was remarkable. One woman learned to read in nine days; others were proficient at the end of two weeks. After observing the progress made by one of the schools Governor Orozco of Patzún said "This truly is a work of God."

Prior to the efforts of Townsend the Indians had always felt that it was impossible for them to learn to read. They were of the belief that it was an accomplishment of the cultured people only.

IMPROVED COLONIC TREATMENT

DELAY ACTION
ON BASEBALL
AT CITY BOWL

Because two members of the city council were not present at last night's meeting of the board, no action was taken on the Santa Ana Merchants baseball team's request to use the Municipal bowl for Sunday baseball.

The three members of the council who were present agreed to postpone voting on the project until a full board was present.

At the meeting, a petition reported signed by 1182 church people of the city, asking the council not to grant permission for Sunday baseball in the bowl, and another petition signed by 54 persons who live in close proximity of the bowl also asking the council to turn down the application, were received and filed.

A letter from Carl Rucker, manager of the team, in which he stated there would be no noise or disturbance created if the permit were granted, also was received by the board.

R. Shepard, of 1006 North Main street, appeared before the council in behalf of the baseball team and explained that the new location was needed, due to the fact that the diamond where the team had been playing on West First street, was being taken over by the airport on which property it is located.

Elmer Steffensen, of 1006 North Main street, asked the council to turn down the application, so that the board would not appear as sponsors of Sunday baseball in Santa Ana. He said he was interested in boys in Santa Ana and that he would much prefer to see that they would go into the bowl.

Yvonne O'Brien, of 1004 West Sixth street, also asked the council to turn down the application. He said he was responsible for some 400 names on the petition, but declared he had not signed it himself.

O'Brien declared that renters in the neighborhood of the bowl were using noise created there as an excuse to demand lower rents and that he had been forced to reduce rent in a house he owns on account of the bowl's nearness to his property.

In asking that Sunday ball games not be allowed, he declared he would like to have one day a week to rest so he could collect his thoughts for the coming week.

Cabin are now up and the men who are building it will complete it as soon as their own personal duties allow.

Dinner for Officers Marks Close of O. E. S. Term

Anticipating the date of December 12, when duties executed by officers of Santa Ana chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, during the past year will devolve upon new shoulders, Mrs. W. J. Dean, who has served her organization as worthy matron, entertained Friday night with an affair known traditionally as the "matron's retiring party." The dinner and bridge, which featured officers comprising the 1932 executive corps, was given in the Dean residence at 402 East Walnut street. Two other groups enlarged Mrs. Dean's guest list, these consisting of "substitutes" and of "trailers," the latter term designating husbands of the several officers.

Special significance was lent the event by the presentation of gifts to the officers and to George A. Shippe, worthy patron, the presents representing an expression on the part of Mrs. Dean of her gratitude for their support during the past 12 months. Feminine members of the officer group were rewarded with beautiful sets of silver salad forks, the two men officers, Ray Spauld and Ray Snyder, receiving binnacle lanterns. To Mrs. Shippe his fellow-ranking officer presented a handsome coffee table in appreciation for his cooperative work.

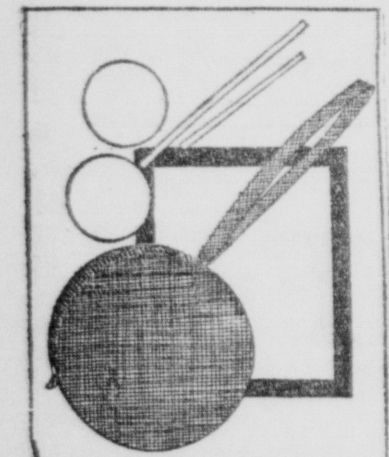

Guests enjoyed an excellent dinner of four courses, seated at a table appointed strikingly in gold and white. A period of bridge play followed, with Mrs. Dean providing prizes for the winner in each of the three groups represented. High scores were held by Mrs. Ray Spauld, among the officers; Mrs. Al Adrain, among substitutes, and Paul Adrain, among "trailers."

Mrs. Dean had the assistance in serving of her father, R. V. Cox, and of her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Dean were Messrs. Ray Spauld, Lloyd Folger, Ray Golden, Harvey Dimmitt, Glen Lyman, William Wyckoff, Joe Herschler, Paul Adrain, Ashel Hardy, Theodore Hunter, Harold Irwin, Ray Snyder, Roland Kloess, Henry Meyers, Charles Ryan, Al Adrain, Keemann, Mrs. Marie Fowler, Miss Viola Adrain, R. V. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Conklin.

SANTA SUGGESTS

Flapjack Purse Timely Gift
You can make your school chum or youngster, mother, or aunt a neat and very acceptable flapjack purse for little cost and little effort.

Buy one-half yard of felt and the same amount of lining material. Also enough zipper to close it. Cut circles with a nine-inch diameter and joining hands two inches wide. The straps should be one and one-half inches in width and as long or as short as your personal taste dictates.

Make up your circle wrong side out and then join it at the seams to the felt circle. Do your hand-joining with a double thread and very little, tight stitches so it won't break.

Varied Entertainment Planned for Guest Over Week End

Miss Jane Jackson of Hollywood, here as the week-end guest of Miss Louise Maloney, 1620 North Baker street, inspired an enjoyable party given Saturday night by Miss Maloney and Mrs. Eleanor Hope in the home of Mrs. Hope and her mother, Mrs. E. A. Reid on West Collihue avenue, Orange.

A buffet supper was served with Mrs. Reid assisting the co-hostesses. Those present were Miss Jackson, honoree, Miss Katherine Jessup, Miss Marie Scriven, the hostesses, Miss Maloney and Mrs. Hope, and Messrs. Jack Fredericks, John Norton, Woodson Oglesby and Frederick Elliott. They were joined later in the evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lancaster, Messrs. Jerry Price, Grant Goddickson, and others, for informal bridge playing.

Early Sunday morning Miss Jackson was taken quite hunting by a bevy of friends, and her pleasant week-end visit was concluded that afternoon when she returned to Hollywood in company with her mother, Mrs. Rue Jackson.

Big Eyes and Little Tummys
Yesterday, I said that I would have something to say on an important aspect of the mental house cleaning dieters must go through with if they expect to keep their weight at the new low. This is it:

The secret of keeping down overweight is to know the law governing the needs of the body for fat forming foods: In youth habits of eating are formed that do the youth no harm because the body is still growing. When growth is completed these eating habits are so well established the average person never thinks of cutting down the food supply to meet the lesser demands for energy. Consequently the body has no other recourse except to stow away the unused energy foods, and the "stowing away" is done right in the body and appears as fat and more fat.

You do not stoke a furnace after the house is well warmed, do you? The same rule applies to the amount of food your body needs to run its machinery and to meet the demand you make it when you do something that takes extra effort, like a game of golf or a long brisk walk.

Equalize supply and demand and you can keep your new low weight.

But still I haven't reached that mental attitude you must take on: By that I mean sitting down when your stomach starts raising Cain and telling it where to get off. Of all the selfish pigs going these bodies of ours are the worst. But then, they haven't the ability to think, and we have, so think straight, tell that demanding appetite to lie down and be good, give it a drink of water to hush up, and pretty soon it will take up the new food habit you've decided is best for your own good. Be boss of your own house of life, don't let appetite be boss unless you want to be a candidate for a circus side show.

Tomorrow, I'll start the suggestions for the follow-up diet.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Carrot Ring

4 cups mashed cooked carrot
4 tablespoons crumbs
4 eggs, whites beaten stiff
1 cup sweet cream (thin)
1 teaspoon salt

This is such a satisfying dish.

It can be as simple as you wish, or as "high-hat." It all depends on what you serve with it. Just suppose you find your cupboard and refrigerator as bare as Mother Hubbard's, but that you have a few eggs, perhaps a glass of chipped beef, maybe a can of tuna, and that the milk man is still to come.

The carrots we'll assume you can get at the corner grocer's. Cook the required amount and mash them, not too fine. Mix them with the cream, the salt beaten with the four yolks, and beaten as stiff as you can beat them. Fold the beaten whites into the carrot part with that cutting motion you use in making angel food cake, and when properly mixed arrange in a buttered mould, one that can be covered. Set the mould in hot water and bake in a very moderate oven 1-1 1/2 hours. Or, if you prefer, steam in an open kettle the required time.

The degree of heat is very important. Remember this is a custard mixture and demands low heat for proper baking.

Turn the ring carefully onto a platter, fill center with the creamed mixture, garnish with a wreath of parsley and send to the table. For a formal luncheon party creamed chicken with sliced almonds is especially good with this carrot ring.

In the ring there are almost 2000 calories, half of which belong to the energy makers. The creamed filling would go another 1500 at least, so you see—

Chapter Welcomes New Members at Holiday Program

Making their December meeting one of unusual charm and interest, members of Santa Ana chapter D. A. R. met Saturday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. rooms for a delightful program. Welcomed as new members of the chapter were Mrs. Martha Moring and Miss Nina Moring.

Mrs. Robert Horn presented the afternoon's program, reading Tolstol's "What Men Live By," dramatized by Virginia Church. Her poignantly dramatic interpretation of the classic proved to be one of the most interesting readings ever given before the chapter.

With Mrs. M. M. Holmes, regent, presiding, a business session was conducted. Mrs. O. S. Catland reported on a talk on "The California Indian," given by Judge Fred A. Baker at the D. A. R. council meeting held last month in Riverside. Judge Baker is of the Indian Field Service, department of the interior.

Presiding over the enjoyable social hour following were Mrs. C. F. Skirren, Mrs. Jennie Crawford, Mrs. W. D. Guthrie, Mrs. O. S. Johnson, Mrs. Earl Morris and Mrs. Marietta Phillee. Mrs. E. C. Summers and Mrs. M. C. Hoyt poured tea from a table made attractive with Christmas decorations.

Members found that the George Washington Bicentennial plates which they had ordered some time ago had arrived for Saturday's meeting, and much time was spent in admiring the significant figures. During the meeting, gifts for Angel Island were collected.

Music Club Studies Origin of Opera

An article dealing with the beginnings of the opera and of the oratorio, in which works of the Greeks were cited and the compositions of Richard Wagner commented upon were read before the Junior Music club by Mrs. Marie Stanton Eversly, club sponsor, at a meeting Friday. The club met in the Eversly studio at 601 South Van Ness avenue and the program was conducted by Miss Marcia Hamilton.

An open discussion followed the reading of the paper, with a musical program by the boys of the club concluding the entertainment. Piano solos were played by David Merriott, "Little Gray Owl," Ralph Tipping, "Cabin Dance," and Billy Guiley, "Sweet Flowers."

First place in a musical game following was taken by Miss Ruth Hawley, her closest competitor being Miss Dorothy Merriott. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Eversly, assisted by Miss Hamilton.

At an earlier meeting of the club Miss Donna Baker presided, introducing program participants.

The society will assemble next on December 16, it was announced.

County Clubwomen Are Entertained Here at Board Meeting

Approximately 60 members of the different women's clubs of Orange county assembled yesterday in Legion hall of this city, to enjoy the entertainment and business program of the mid-winter board meeting of Orange county federation of Women's clubs, and the hospitality extended by Santa Ana Woman's club, hostess organization.

In the absence of Mrs. J. D. Watkins, Woman's club president, welcome was accorded the guests by Mrs. William Wells, vice president, who read a friendly message left with her by Mrs. Watkins prior to the latter's departure for the east.

Mrs. E. E. Smith of Anaheim, county federation president, presided over the sessions which opened promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning. Many reports were read and clubwomen heard details of the recent district convention in Palm Springs with delegates from different clubs offering their impressions and experiences. Mrs. William Whitehead of the Woman's club, and Mrs. F. C. Rowland of Santa Ana Elbel society, were among those speaking.

It developed that this county was represented at the district meeting by approximately half a hundred progressive clubwomen.

Business matters which the county federation had called to its attention included the projected action to be taken on changing the status of those suffering from mental ailments who at present are given the same status as the criminal element of the state.

Program features included community singing of different Christmas songs; the delightful presentation of Van Dyke's story, "The Sad Shepherd," by Mrs. J. M. Cloyes, who was gracious enough to assist on the program at the last minute, when Mrs. Joseph Thurston was ill and unable to give her Christmas talk, and solos by Mrs. E. Haven Smith, "Holy Night" and "Adorable One" with Mrs. R. G. Miller as her accompanist.

Morning sessions were held in the clubroom where palms, coteaster sprays and poinsettias expressed the Christmas spirit. This was in the afternoon when dining room doors were opened and clubwomen invited to the tables, spread with white and glowing with poinsettias and scarlet candles. The appetizing luncheon was prepared and served by Legion Auxiliary women.

In the afternoon short talks by various club leaders were given in intervals between musical numbers. Mrs. J. G. Lambird of the hostess club, played a group of piano selections, "Hopi Snake Dance," "By the Waters of Minnetonka" (Lieur-Canaan), and "In the Palace Gardens."

Mrs. Taylor Johnson presented the beautiful "Legend of the Yosemite," which combined song and recitative features, all typically Indian. Enhancing the charm of the legends she related them and sang the lyrics, were her effective Indian costumes, and the stage setting of rugs, baskets and pottery. Assisting her were Mrs. Frank Ey, Mrs. R. G. Carman, Mrs. Ella Webster and Mrs. R. C. Harris, also wearing appropriate costumes.

Mrs. Ey sang "Pale Moon," very sweetly as an interpolated number, with the others assisting in refrains. The Indian group brought program and board meeting to a close, with Mrs. Smith extending her appreciation to the Santa Ana Women's club for their hospitality, and voicing friendly Christmas wishes for all clubwomen of the county.

Inaw orchestra at the Arlington hotel. The orchestra members are traveling by automobile, with engagements for each night en route to the Arlington, scheduled for a six days' trip. Mr. and Mrs. Stumpf will make brief visits with the latter's sister, Mrs. Roy Wardlow and family to Corona, and with their former's sister, Mrs. S. J. Round and family of Holtville, Imperial Valley.

Holiday Party Planned By Orange Choir as Benefit Affair

The young people are setting such a nominal price for the party that they seem assured of a crowd, especially when prospective patrons learn that the returns are to be applied to a fund for the purchase of a new organ for the church.

Miss Dorcas Rositter, in charge of all publicity for the party, today announced the committees whose members are giving of time and energies to plans for the event.

"Humor, Wit and Laughter" was the general program theme introduced by Mrs. Newell Moore, education director. Miss Delphina Lopez led the discussion by citing Mark Twain as a typical American humorist. Miss Ruth Stevenson talked on contemporary American humorists in general, while those of France were presented by Miss Ione Hanson, of Scotland, by Miss Elsie Stenson, of England, and Miss Lynette Robb, of the Misses Lillie Fosberg and Madalynn Phillee also gave short talks.

Officers present were Miss Mary Ford, president; Miss Dorothy Lindsay, vice president; Miss Mary Louise Wallace, corresponding secretary; Miss Lillian McDonald, treasurer, and Miss Lucille Meyer, recording secretary.

The group took part in entertaining games and contests, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Edna Machander, mother of the honoree, presented dainty aprons to Mrs. Latham, Mrs. Clara Walton and Mrs. Edna White, who also had recent birthdays.

Those present were Mesdames Pearl Ballard, R. H. Snyder, Emma C. Wagner, Clarence Vogle, Fred Baum, W. McKee, Cynthia Davis, Nora Machander, A. F. Granas, Clara Richards, R. R. Russick, Fred Almas, Clara Walton, Edna White, Edna Machander and Mrs. Latham.

Y. W. C. A. News Notes

To Camp Emma Otis
Members of the Girl Reserve Ring circle and cabinet left Friday afternoon soon after lunch for Camp Emma Otis for a combination pleasure trip and program planning retreat. A treasure hunt was planned for Saturday noon. The group returned to Santa Ana after their worship service on Sunday morning. Miss Jean Mulbar was in charge of the Sunday service.

Old-time Magazine Has Prominent Part in Party Program

Probably no meeting of Elbel First Travel section members during the club year is anticipated with more interest nor enjoyed with more enthusiasm than the December session, for it is then that the members, who have been closely associated in Elbel work for many years, lay aside club interests, and devote themselves wholeheartedly to sociability.

Yesterday was no exception to this rule, and when Mrs. C. S. Kendall opened her home at 311 Cypress street to the group, it was the preliminary to a joyous afternoon.

Yuletide decorations contributed to the pleasure, and Mrs. Kendall had planned several surprises. These included an especially unique feature when the productive volume of Peterson's Magazine of 1872, and read aloud a Thanksgiving story of six decades ago. A pretty love story was interwoven with the theme, and members found the tale rarely enjoyable.

From Thanksgiving of 1872 to Christmas of 1932, was a long step, but the clubwomen took it when the annual gift exchange was introduced. Mrs. Kendall had planned the manner of distributing the gifts, and when each member had received a daintily wrapped package, a merry interval followed during which all exclaimed over the gifts in general and their own in particular.

Announcement had been made that there would be no refreshments at this party, but Mrs. Kendall had reserved a final surprise for her guests, and climaxed her hospitality with the serving of rich sweet cider and sugared doughnuts.

There was but one absent member, Mrs. George E. Smith, while those assembled to enjoy the expression of the Christmas spirit with the hostess, Mrs. Kendall, were Mrs. A. W. Ames, Mrs. J. L. Dryer, Mrs. H. C. Davies of Los Angeles, Mrs. M. F. Heathman, Mrs. Steven Ross, Mrs. L. L. Shaw, Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mrs. W. M. Smart and Mrs. L. W. Van Cleave.

NEW MEMBERS WELCOMED BY WOMAN'S CLUB

ORANGE, Dec. 6.—Three new members were welcomed to the Woman's club yesterday, Mrs. C. E. Lush, Mrs. Jane Welsh and Mrs. Don Marsh. The clubhouse was decorated with baskets of poinsettias and cotoneaster.

The guest artists of the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Olds, of Anaheim. Mr. Olds sang three numbers, "I Love Life," "I Must Go Down to the Sea Again" and "Fragrance," and as an encore sang an old time Christmas carol. Seldom have club members been so delightfully entertained by a musical program. Mr. Olds sang with feeling and brilliant technique and Mrs. Olds, who was his accompanist, played beautifully.

Mrs. Earl Crawford, president of the club, gave an interesting resume of the recent district club convention at Palm Springs, where she said an international tie had been carried out in the program. In telling of a talk on laws which women should study, Mrs. Crawford said that clubwomen had been told that mothers are not the legal guardians of their children in case of the father's death unless they have been appointed so in writing by their husbands.

She said that women had been advised to begin studying now in order to be able to vote intelligently at the election in four years.

W. C. T. U. Holds Day of Prayer

The next regular meeting of Orange W. C. T. U. is to be held December 13 at 2:30 o'clock in the Presbyterian church.

Intendant of the department, Mrs. Ross Harlan. The party was held in the social hall of the church and those present were Edith Oswald, Maxine Evans, Rosemary Ackley, Lois Mitchell, Adalene Gray and Thelma Cook.

Miss Lois King returned recently from a six months' visit in Paris, Texas, where she visited her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. King. Miss King is employed at the Saddle Rock cafe.

ENGLAND OF PAST, PRESENT BROUGHT TO ATTENTION OF WOMAN'S CLUB IN REVIEWS

ORANGE, Dec. 6.—The England of the past with its stern traditions down to the England of the present with its more or less chaotic conditions, many of which are at complete variance with those of days gone by, entered largely in the group of books dealing with English life reviewed by Virginia Cole Pritchard at the meeting of the Orange Woman's club yesterday afternoon.

Before presenting the book, Mrs. Pritchard. It is a story of a man and a girl, the girl loving the man enough to brave criticism of him in a controversy in which all of England takes sides. The hero is accused of being a coward, people, recently the king's speech at the opening of parliament, had been criticized for the first time in history. This shows, she said, the fineness of the thread which binds the royal family to the people.

Books On South America

The next group selected by Mrs. Pritchard touched on South America, a country which she said was at present a most popular place for travelers and novelists and where nothing is said to be durable but revolutions, which constitute the biggest business of the continent. "Light and Shadow of South America," by Kasimir Edschmid, was highly recommended to the clubwomen by the speaker. Another South American book reviewed was "South American Meditations," by Count Herman Keyserling.

The last group of books reviewed were on Mexico, "The People of the Serpent," by Edward Herbert Thompson; "Thunder in Their Veins," an intimate picture of the great men of Mexico, by Leon B. Mounts, and "The West is Still Wild," by Harry Carr. The last two books introduced were the autobiography of Mary Tustin, "Earth Horizon" and "Forgive Us Our Trespasses," by Lloyd Douglas.

"As De Are," a continuation of "As We Were," by E. F. Benson, shows the different eras of England and the changes since the World war, and might be applied to changing conditions in other countries as well, Mrs. Pritchard said. In reviewing "The Journal," by Arnold Bennett, Mrs. Pritchard said that Bennett was the writer who originated the custom of writers' becoming critics.

Outstanding Novel

V. Sackville-West, the author of "Family History," has written a novel with three outstanding characters, old Mr. Gerald, his daughter-in-law, Evelyn, and his grandson, Dan. It was recommended as interesting reading. The leading character, Mr. Gerald, Mrs. Pritchard said, might well have been drawn from the well known cartoon of John Bull. He is a self-made man whose sons will not work. George Swinnerton's "Georgian House" was described by the reviewer as "amusing."

"Flowering Wilderness," which was written by John Galsworthy and which won the coveted Nobel prize for literature, is a novel different than any written before by the well known author, said

The tot whom Junior took soon went to sleep and then kind Duncy spent a half an hour in tucking it quite safely into bed. "You Tynies can run away. You'll wake the child up. If you stay," said Duncy. "Gee, I wish that I could rest my weary head." Then Scouty shouted, "Well, why not? Why, all around us there's a lot of room to sprawl out on the grass. Let's all enoos for a while."

Their friend the hotytot then cried, "That's fine! I'll stay right by your side." The hotytot soon heard them snore and he began to smile.

All of a sudden, through the air, there came a bugle call and there was much excitement all around. The hotytot cried, "Hey! Wake up, you Tynies! You shall see the king, if you will come with me. He now is in the palace. This will be your lucky day!"

The Tynies all jumped to their feet and Windy shouted, "What a treat! If he's a tiny ruler he will be a real strange sight."

"Please take us quickly as you can." Then with the hotytot they ran. "We'll promise you," said Coppy, "that we all will act all right."

They reached the palace. "My, oh my, I'm glad we didn't pass this by," said Scouty. "And I hope the king will be glad that we came."

The hotytot replied, "If you will do just as you're told to do, I know that all will be all right. If not, 'twill be a shame."

It really was a wondrous thing to them, as they approached the king. The ruler sat upon a throne, quite haughty, if you please. "Hi, hi!" the king cried. "Let me see you kneel down right in front of me." It didn't take wee Duncy long to drop down on his knees.

King Solomon was a man who lived so many years in the country that he was the whole push. He was an awfully wise man and one day two women came to him, each holding to the leg of a baby and almost pulling it in two and each claiming it. And King Solomon wasn't feeling good and said, "Why couldn't the brat have been twins and stopped this bother?" And then he took his ax and was going to chop the poor little innocent baby in two, when the real mother said, "Stop, Solomon, stay thy hand. Let the old hag have it. If I can't have a whole baby I won't have any." Then Solomon said to her to take the baby home and wash its face, for he knew it was hers. He told the other woman to go chase herself. And that's all I know about King Solomon.

The DANGER of BEING AFRAID

One man has a fear of going about bareheaded. . . . If he awakens at night, his first act is to clap on his hat.

We are born with only two active fears . . . one of them at loss of bodily support, as when a chair upon which we are about to sit is suddenly withdrawn.

Unless you can control your most destructive emotion---fear---it may ruin your whole life; but there are ways of putting it in its place

By DONALD A. LAIRD

Director, Colgate University Psychological Laboratory

WHAT control have you over your most destructive emotion—fear? This question is engaging increasingly the attention of both medical and mental sciences.

Not only do economists almost daily ascribe the current business depression to fear, but only the other day Major C. L. Chase of the U. S. Army aviation post at Mitchel Field, Long Island, declared that fear is a potential condition in every American military aviator. Fear, in the view of the flying doctor, lurks under the surface in every military birdman, and in every one else for that matter, ready under proper conditions to spring out and cause death-dealing crashes, killings and other catastrophes.

Only recently, too, have psychologists at the University of California and at Colgate devised a questionnaire test whereby everyday folk can measure the extent of their fearfulness.

In Shakespeare's day, fear was set down as some mysterious thing born in a man, that made him a coward. Edwin E. Slosson, famous chemist who died in 1929, attributed this strongest of human emotions to the type of diet a man consumed, saying that "the variation of a few hundredths of 1 per cent in the glucose (or sugar content) of the blood may make the difference between cowardice and courage; may determine whether a man be shot as a slacker or medaled as a hero."

Today science is even more inclined to follow the lead of the psychiatrist and to look upon this signally disruptive force as something of a mind cancer; an inherently natural emotion which has a perverse desire to take a wrong track and grow into what amounts to an all-controlling obsession, or even insanity, unless it is continually checked and put in its proper place.

HISTORY, as well as everyday life, is full of strange examples of men whose fears got out of hand and to a visible extent overshadowed their lives.

Peter the Great of Russia, though he conquered Sweden and the Tartars, consolidated the old Russian empire and built the city of St. Petersburg over a swamp, none the less paled, trembled and all but fainted when forced to cross a perfectly safe bridge. His descendant, Nicholas, the last czar, developed such a fear of his Jewish subjects that, upon the slightest report of conspiracy or intrigue on their part, he would embark on pogroms of slaughter unmatched since days of savagery.

James I of England, though sound enough in other respects, always was thrown into tremulous panic at the mere sight of a drawn sword. Among famed writers, De Maupassant, Bunyan and Tolstoy invariably quaked and found themselves in a cold sweat at the mention of the word death.

THROUGH information from others, the writer knows of similar cases among living persons. While it is not generally known, of course, there is in the United States Army a high ranking officer who has an obsessing fear of open places. Behind him is a distinguished career, he has been many times decorated for bravery, yet on finding himself alone in such a wide open space as Du Pont Circle, Washington, he has been known to be virtually paralyzed and helpless.

The famous painting of Peter the Great saved from assassination as a youth at the foot of the throne. . . . But, brave enough before drawn steel, he always got panicky when he had to cross a bridge.

The writer knows of another person who has a similar fear of going about with his head bare; even at night he keeps his hat near his bedside, and if he is awakened suddenly his first act is to clap on his head covering.

By the same token, the case records of psychiatrists contain manifold instances of such unreasoning phobias, as they are called—people obsessed and dominated by fear of water, cats, infection, high places, blushing, and even of money.

How these fears arise was, until comparatively recently, a deep mystery. Certainly, according to the latest scientific information, they are not born in human beings. Perhaps the best proof is that a baby is practically fearless.

Experiments at Johns Hopkins University and elsewhere, in which infants of different racial origins and heredity were the subjects, have demonstrated that we are born with only two active fears—one at noise, such as thunder, and the other at loss of bodily support, as when a chair upon which we are about to sit down is suddenly withdrawn.

Our emotions were again thrown into a panic.

Curiously enough, this struggle of reason and emotion may go on for years unnoticed by the sufferer's family and companions, and finally break out with almost volcanic force. In the course of laboratory study, two such cases have come to the present writer's attention.

ONE had to do with a young mother of two children. She was happily married, and so far as was known had nothing particular to worry about. Yet more or less suddenly she developed an obsession against the noise made by any sort of bell.

If the telephone, doorbell or dinner bell rang she was thrown into a panic of fear, would cringe and become hysterical. Her husband and friends were astounded. What was there to fear, they pleaded time and again, but she could only whimper, "I don't know—only stop that awful sound."

Finally, psychiatrists, delving into her past life, discovered that she was once in a street car collision, and that throughout the accident, in which persons were killed and injured, the motorman of the car she was on rang his bell furiously. Always afterward, the sound of bells had brought back these memories, consciously or subconsciously, and she had had to struggle against panic.

At last this fear became such an obsession that she could not struggle successfully against it, and when a bell rang her fear emotions overwhelmed her. Fortunately, as is often the case, when the whole misfortune, the connection between that old accident and her present condition, was logically presented to her she was again able to reason the fear away.

WHILE such an instance is extreme and represents abnormal fear developments, experiments conducted with many classes at the Colgate Psychological Laboratory have proved that practically everyone suffers from some pet fear—a fear that has the power to overcome their normal mental balance for a greater or lesser period.

For example, statistics show that more than 50 per cent of young people tend to lose their heads in fright when they are riding in an automobile and barely escape a collision, when they look down from a high place, when they are barked at by a strange dog, when believing themselves alone they come unexpectedly upon another person.

Interesting experiments have been recently conducted at the University of California and at Colgate with a view to making it possible for everyone to determine just how fearful he or she is, then, in situations wherein he or she was not born to be afraid. At Colgate, the fear check list devised by Dr. George M. Stratton of California was revised and put to the test.

The list, reproduced on this page in a form which everyone can readily use, includes a number of questions dealing with what are known as normal fear situations—situations we all encounter in daily life.

Statistics show that 50 per cent of young people lose their heads in fright whenever they happen to look down from a high place.

CHECK YOUR FEAR RATING WITH THESE QUESTIONS

Answer "yes" for each question describing a situation which makes you feel moderate fear, or a quickening of the heart-beat or breathing, or merely timidity, as well as those which produce real panic.

1. Are you frightened when you are in an automobile and barely escape a collision?
2. Are you frightened when you have to cross a street at foot with trolley and automobile traffic passing on each side of you?
3. Are you frightened when you are on a railroad platform and a train draws in close to you?
4. Are you frightened when you look down from a high place?

5. Are you frightened when there is an alarm of fire in your neighborhood?
6. Are you frightened when you hear a fire alarm anywhere?
7. Are you frightened when a dog comes toward you and barks or growls?
8. Are you frightened when you see someone else in an accident?
9. Are you frightened when you think no one else is around and then suddenly come upon someone?
10. Are you frightened when you have to go into an unlighted room after dark?

11. Are you frightened when you have to enter a dark house at night, even when you know someone is in the house?

12. Are you frightened when you are on a dimly lighted street at night and see someone coming toward you?

13. Are you frightened when you awaken at night in your own room and hear sounds, such as a window shade scraping against the curtains?

The average healthy young man answers "yes" to 4 1/2 questions, the average young woman to slightly more, older women many more still, older men fewer than young men.

DR. EINSTEIN CROSS-QUESTIONED

The action of the State Department in staging an inquisitorial drama in the consulate's office at Berlin, in the examination of Dr. Einstein, presents the United States in a humiliating role before the nations of the world. There is no other nation, except our own, to which Dr. Einstein could have been invited, which would have subjected him to the humiliation to which he was subjected by our consulate, with the possible exception of Italy.

In France, England, Czechoslovakia, Poland or Spain, he would have been gladly welcomed for his marvelous ability and the luster of his name, regardless of what might be his political opinions. But it is reserved for our country, the great haven of refuge for the politically and religiously oppressed of the world, to put him through cross-examination because of his political opinions.

He has never emphasized his political views, except that he does not believe in organized slaughter called "war," and in fact is strongly opposed to it, and says so. Of course, we have denied citizenship to some people who were so conscientiously opposed to killing people, that they said they could not participate in it, or at least wanted to reserve the right to follow the dictates of their conscience in the matter, but Professor Einstein has not been seeking citizenship. His invitation came from the California Institute of Technology, and after his work there, he is to become a professor of the super-university of mathematics that is to be instituted at Princeton.

Some professional patriots somewhere in the East, who have taken it upon themselves to protect our country from the opposition of those who differ in some respects from these professional patriots, appealed to the government to deny Dr. Einstein the right of entrance. We do not blame him for becoming indignant. We were delighted at the declaration of his wife that they must know by eleven o'clock today whether they will have their passports visaed or they wouldn't come to America.

The educated men on the other side of the ocean, may, with perfect grace, insist that when an invitation is given from an institution of learning in America for them to come, that it must be accompanied by a guarantee from the State Department that their passport will be visaed. In the meantime, we can see the leaders of the principal nations of the world "grinning," as they are "sneering."

This whole "tempest in a teapot" is due to the activities of Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, president of the Woman Patriot Corporation. It is very probable that of the names of men eligible to become professors of this super-university, none of them would qualify under the rules laid down and applied by this woman. Progress has been made, however, in the world in spite of and not by reason of the aid of such organizations.

MR. GARNER FAILS TO ACHIEVE
"GREAT" PURPOSE

The resolution for the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment failed yesterday in the House of Congress. The "wet" leaders believed that they had a sufficient number of votes upon which they could rely to have the two-thirds majority.

We did not believe this at any time, and in fact, were surprised that there was as near the required two-thirds majority as there was. This probably will eliminate the question for this session. It will come up in the new Congress, and it may be possible that a special session may be called.

There is one good feature about the vote being had early, and that is, that Congress can now address itself to other questions, for as long as this matter was unsettled, it would be bound to have the center of the stage in public attention. The failure of the resolution to pass puts off any possibility of a repeal of the Eighteenth amendment for at least another year, because by March 4th the legislatures of the various states will have closed their 1933 sessions, so probably no provisions can be made for a vote in the legislatures of most states, or means set up for state conventions for the consideration of the Eighteenth amendment.

We do not know the number of states that have legislative meetings this year, but in any case, even if they hadn't adjourned, it would necessitate a special session of Congress. President Roosevelt may convene one for this and the passage of a beer bill. With a higher percentage of alcoholic content in beer legal, it is very probable that sentiment will swing in the opposite direction, before the required number of states have an opportunity to vote on the question of the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

While we believe a large number of Congressmen voted for the repeal whose constituents are not in harmony with their vote, certainly we know that those who voted against repeal realized their constituents were supporting them in that position. Among these were our own Congressman, Phil Swing, and the Los Angeles Congressman who ran for the United States Senate, Mr. Crail.

AUTHOR DISAVOWS DISTORTION OF BRAIN CHILD

The literary world and people with sympathies "on that side of the fence" have a laugh on Hollywood today. Ernest Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms" has been filmed and distorted from the original by the happy ending which the movie directors apparently always feel proper and profitable.

Mr. Hemingway sold the film rights to the book. The film is now ready to be shown and prior to placing it before the public the company offered a private showing to Mr. Hemingway and his relatives and friends in the Arkansas town where he is visiting. They wired the author: "Two prints unexpectedly available make possible private showing of the motion-picture version of 'A Farewell to Arms.' Immediate reply appreciated so arrangements can be made."

Mr. Hemingway says that he replied as follows: Use your imagination as to where to put two prints unexpectedly available of Bersage version of 'A Farewell to Arms' but do not send here."

Mr. Hemingway was misquoted some time ago to the effect that he had intended a happy ending to "A Farewell to Arms" and therefore he was perfectly satisfied with the movie change. In the light of these developments it seems that someone other than Mr. Hemingway was mistaken. When he wrote the book he evidently knew just how he wanted that book to end.

Motion picture producers have made a great error in trying to cover too large a field of interest in a single picture. It is true that there is a large class of people who go to see the movies to relax, be amused, and forget problems. There are other people who would go to see the filming of outstanding novels as they were written. They are the ones who are always disappointed in the filming of a serious book for it is distorted into an amusement for people who would not tolerate a great tragedy.

CONGRESS THE OUTSTANDING
HOPE

We wonder if it wouldn't be a good idea to credit our law-makers with average intelligence. Congress has not been in session for some time, and there have been no problems solved in the meantime.

The help that the country has received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can be credited to the action of Congress in enacting the law. The same is true of the help rendered by reason of the amendments to the Federal Reserve Act.

We will either be led up through legal and constitutional methods, under the action of our law making body, or we will be led by illegal and hostile elements through revolutionary processes. The ridicule and abuse of our law-makers is a very popular sport, but it is an insane one, which is calculated to undermine the whole confidence of our people in government, and remove from Congress the power to lead in an evolutionary way.

While the facts that have been brought out by the engineers of New York, in their study under the name which they have given credit to their group or their program of "Technocracy," are startling to the nation, and are invaluable if used properly, whatever advantageous changes, however, are brought about through that knowledge, must come through our national law-making body, aided by our states, if they come through orderly processes. And there are many people who believe that this information, which has been brought out, is the most valuable, if not the most startling, that has come since the announcement on July 4, 1776, of the Declaration of Independence.

Peru and Chile Get Together

Christian Science Monitor

Peru and Chile have effectively buried the hatchet. It would appear that the War of the Pacific of 1879 and the long Tacna-Arica dispute have definitely passed into history. These two countries, implacable foes less than a decade ago, have signed a commercial agreement to cover trading through the frontier between Tacna and Arica. Ten years ago a sign in Iquique, Chile, announced that neither dogs nor Peruvians were allowed therein. And only two years ago ex-President Leguia was accused by his Peruvian compatriots of having, among other "crimes," ratified the "shameful" settlement of the Tacna-Arica dispute.

The present agreement is intended to establish a modus vivendi pending the formulation of a formal treaty. A joint commission is to be established to study the whole question of trade relations between the countries and to suggest bases for the permanent treaty. If the present agreement succeeds, not only will one of the most thorny problems of inter-American relations have been solved, but a step will have been taken to bring about a logical cooperation between two nations whose interests are better served by working together than by fighting.

The spirit of the agreement between Chile and Peru appears in Article VII, which reads as follows: "All the products, Chilean and Peruvian, covered by this agreement will be considered as national in the other country, as regards internal laws." Admirable concessions!

It is evident that proposals of the Chilean Foreign Minister many months ago that a Latin-American customs union be established were not empty gestures. Chile has proved its sincerity by getting together with its erstwhile foe to the extent that many of Peru's products are to be considered as national "as regards internal laws." Peru has been no less gracious. This is indeed a step forward in the direction of mellowing the extreme forms of nationalism which were so evident in both Chile and Peru only yesterday. If Chile and Peru can work together to dig themselves out of the rut of depression, any other two nations in the world can do the same.

Italy Builds Good Will

Pomona Progress-Bulletin

According to advance notices the new Italian ocean liner, Conte di Savoia, about to make her maiden trip to New York, offers a pleasant life on the ocean wave entirely free from the qualms of sickness. No longer will it be "a pleasure for how other folks are tossed on the seas."

A huge gyroscopic stabilizer is reported to hold the ship on even keel no matter how hard the tempests roar or how high the billows roll. This equipment is said to have cost a million dollars and those who suffer from the tortures of seasickness will consider it cheap at the price.

This ship is Italy's latest bid for the Atlantic trade, much of which she hopes to divert to her home ports and if voyagers can be delivered there with sound and stabilized stomachs, Mussolini's state will be entitled to a large measure of international goodwill.

"—And Make It Short All Over!"

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

REGISTERING REGRET*

Perhaps the Canadian "mountie" May crank up his battered old car, Drive crazily forth to the far Frozen North, And always come back with his man. But such an unusual method I always must gaze on askance; There can be no appeal to a "mountie" a-wheel, And I look for the end of romance.

As soon could I picture a cowboy Who abandoned the tricks of his art, And, unbooted or spurred, galloped out to ride herd In a chug-chugging gasoline cart, And who cut out a "mashed of critters" For the stockyards to grind into meat, By stopping his car with a jolt and a jar, And throwing a rope from his seat.

And what of the wild Western sheriff When a bad man has held up a train, When he starts in pursuit of the crook and the loot Over mountain and valley and plain? Must he stop when he suffers a blow-out, Or stalls on a treacherous pass, To lament his despair and his helplessness there As soon as he runs out of gas?

I have always been strong for the "mounties" As they rode up the long northern track, Never feeling a qualm, but unruffled and calm As they brought every prisoner back. But now that the gasoline wagon Is to play a star part in their game, When I see on the screen a wild thief-chasing scene My emotions will be the same.

PARAGRAPHS

By Robert Quillen

Uneasy lies the head that wears a landslide. Europe has the wrong idea. The wolf isn't cancelled when he is on somebody else. Mr. Roosevelt must be getting tired of the words: "My motive in helping to elect you was unselfish, but—"

Alas for communism! If all American incomes were lumped and equally divided, you'd get only $469 a year.

THE INCREASED BUSINESS OF TELEPHONE BOOTHS MAY BE DUE TO THE FACT THAT PEOPLE CAN NO LONGER AFFORD REGULAR TURKISH BATHS.

The objection to taxation on a sliding scale is that it always slides down to the consumer. Well, if prohibition dies at the early age of fifteen, it won't be the result of working.

In other words, a sales tax is an unfair burden on the poor man unless you call it a beer tax.

AMERICANISM: Using all of our energy to make better men; wondering why we crack under the strain when trouble comes.

"What day in human history caused the greatest woe and anxiety?" asks one of those questions. Speaking off-hand, we'd say tomorrow.

We never realize how fortunate we are. It took a lot of suffering to teach us that something could be worse than a radio crooner. Changing the course of the Colorado wasn't such a stunt. Song writers changed it from brick red to silver.

GOOD MANNERS ARE THE KIND THAT KEEP YOU QUIETLY PATIENT WHILE THE FELLOW WHO HAMMERS ON THE TABLE GETS SERVICE.

When the poor fellow loses his memory and wanders away, there's no cure like the discovery that his wife has inherited $50,000 from Uncle Jim.

Don't get the idea that your opinion isn't valued. Just meet a great man and tell him what a wonder he is. Capitalism needn't worry about the Socialist party so long as America puts it on the head.

No wonder the bull thrives. Think how the buck would multiply if he had four years between shoots.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

Undoubtedly the proposal of a vast prosperity loan will lift its head again when the new administration takes over the reins of power next March.

I want, therefore, to reaffirm some convictions such as a loan which I have expressed in one form or another in other and earlier articles.

A prosperity loan must clearly be considered as emergency economics, for, under normal circumstances, I am convinced that the more we lean on ourselves and the less we lean on government for national economic effectiveness the better.

A vast prosperity loan must, of course, be considered in connection with many other aspects of the financial condition of the government, and any generalization I may make here must be subject to many detailed qualifications, but, in the main, a prosperity loan is a device for shifting part of the burden of a period of depression over to a later period of prosperity.

And this, I think, is sound, for if we insist upon making government and business meet now the full impact of the current emergency we shall, in all likelihood, be driven to two suicidal courses. They are:

(1) We shall be driven to raise taxes to a point that will further hamstring business and industry.

(2) We shall be driven to slash even the soundest of governmental expenditures to a point that will leave our most vital public services starved into anemia for a generation to come.

I am not taken in by the balldoo of those promoters of prosperity loans and public works who see in such measures an all-curative panacea for the depression.

At best they are but one element in a program by which government may help rather than hinder our economic recovery.

It has become a threadbare axiom that we cannot expect economic recovery until we get buying power back into the field.

In so far as prosperity loans and public works help materially to get buying power into the field they are helping towards economic recovery.

PLAYTHINGS

"I want a toy for a little boy seven years old."

"What kind of a toy, madam?"

"Oh, just some little thing that he can play with. I have to take him something. Any bright, attractive toy will answer."

"How's this tumbling man? You wind him up like this and he does like this."

"How much does he cost?"

"Thirty-five cents. Shall I wrap him up?"

The little boy gets another toy. He twists the key and watches the man turn over and over and then he still. He winds him again and watches. Each time his interest grows less and less until by the tenth time he has wound him enough. Perhaps by that time the spring is gone anyway. The tumbling man lies around the house for a few days. He is picked up from under the chair, from the top of the radio, from the table until somebody loses patience and throws the old thing out. That is the life story of many and many a toy.

I like the tumbling men and their relatives for the Christmas stocking. All children like some junk in their playbox. But when they are fed to children all year round there is little pleasure in them and much waste.

The attraction a toy holds for a child is its promise of activity. Not its own activity. The child wants the activity for himself. His whole being is centered on doing something. If he can work his arms and legs and back he is content. The thing that lets him work himself out well is the thing he likes best. And it is the thing he ought to have. The more he can do with his plaything the better it is for him and the more he likes it.

When you buy a doll ask yourself how many things the child can do with it. Can she undress and dress it? Bathe it, brush and comb it, or shampoo its painted locks? Can it speak and move? Sit in a chair at table? Can it stand hard usage? (The parlor doll is not for a child.) It is only a decorative object, if it is a one-action doll, leave it and take one that offers variety and companionship.

All children like and use balls. A ball is not just a ball. There are balls for many occasions. One you roll, one you bounce, one you throw for catching, one you bat and catch, one you punch, one you kick, one you swim on, one you keep in your pocket for use on call. Don't get into a store and buy a ball just because. Try to find what the child can do with this ball and so make it worth his while to own it.

(Copyright, 1932, The Bell Syndicate, Inc.) (Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.)
